General Comments

Article 1 and 2

Comment 3

What is the status of the Convention in the National Legal System?

The status of the Convention is that it does not confer enforceable rights on individuals within the state until Parliament has legislated its provisions into law of the land. The Court of Appeal in the case of Attorney General v Unity Dow BLR 1992 noted that Botswana was a member of the community of civilized states, and could not, therefore, operate on laws and practices that violated the imperatives of the international community. The court further noted that international treaties and conventions could be referred to as an aid to construction of enactments, including the Constitution itself.

If there is a conflict between the provisions of the Convention and National Law which will prevail?

- If there is a conflict between the laws of Botswana and the provisions of the Convention, the laws of Botswana will take precedence over those espoused in the Convention. This is because entries into treaties are an executive function done by the President. If such treaties were to automatically become law and were enforceable without the requisite act of Parliament which makes it the law on the country, then this would amount to a usurpation (taking the authority) of legislative powers by the President without the sanction of the Constitution.

- However, in the case of Unity Dow, the Court of Appeal noted that since Botswana is a member of the community of civilized States (which has undertaken to abide by certain standards of conduct); unless it is possible to do otherwise, it would be wrong for its courts to interpret its legislation in a manner which conflicts with the international obligations Botswana has undertaken. This therefore means that although Botswana has not incorporated the Convention into the laws of Botswana, it is still bound internationally to adhere to the provisions espoused by the Convention. The Court in the above case went on to state that the courts within the Republic would interpret domestic statutory laws in a way that is compatible with the State's responsibility not to breach international laws.

Is the definition of discrimination against women (in the Constitution and national legislation) in line with Article 1 of the Convention (“discrimination against women” shall mean any distinction, or purpose of impairing or nullifying the recognition, enjoyment or exercise by women, irrespective of their marital status, on the basis equality of men and women, of human rights and fundamental freedoms in the political, economic, social, cultural, civil or any other fields)?

- Section 3 of the Constitution provides that “every person in Botswana is entitled to fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual...whatever his or her race, place of origin. Political opinions, color, creed or sex". This section therefore guarantees equal treatment before the law to every person within Botswana. Section 3 is the key or umbrella provision conferring rights and freedoms under the Constitution and in relation to which the other sections in Chapter II of the Constitution merely expound further, elaborate or limit those rights and freedoms.

- Section 15 of the Constitution specifically forbids the making of discriminatory laws. The court of Appeal in the Attorney General v Unity Dow has interpreted Section 15 of the Constitution of Botswana to outlaw discrimination. At section 15 (3) the expression discriminatory is defined as "affording different treatment to different person, attributable wholly or mainly to their respective description by race , tribe, place of origin, political opinions, color or creed whereby persons of one such descriptions are subjected to disabilities or restrictions to which persons of another such descriptions are not made subjected or are accorded privileges or advantages which are not accorded to persons or another such descriptions". The court observed that the main thrust of Section 15 (3) is that discrimination means affording different treatment to different persons wholly or mainly attributable to their respective characteristic groups.
- Section 15 (4) is an exception to Section (10), and provides for the exceptions where differential treatment is acceptable under the Constitution. However, it should be noted that the courts have consequently pronounced that all sections in the Constitution should be interpreted alongside Section 3 which specifically outlaws unequal treatment (for example, see the case Student Representative Council of Molepolole College of Education v Attorney General [1995] B. L. R 178). The observations in the Unity Dow case concerning discrimination apply to all manner and type of conduct and practices that invidiously discriminate against people on the basis of the immutable characteristics enumerated.

- The government of Botswana, by the way of conclusion maintains that Section 15 (3) as read with Section 3 of the Constitution of Botswana prohibits all forms of discrimination; therefore the definition in the Constitution is in line with that which is provided under Article 1 of the Convention.

Comment 4

Highlights of the laws affecting the status of women that were recommended for amendment to align them with the CEDAW, but have not yet been revised and the reasons for not revising them.

Following the review of all laws affecting the status of women in 1997, some laws were not amended in line with CEDAW. The following laws were not reviewed:

- Deserted Wives and Children Protection Act
- Penal Code Amendment on Abortion
- Delicts
- Customary Law

Comment 5

What steps are being made to review Section 15 of the Constitution which exempts adoption, marriage, divorce, burial and devolution of property on death and other matters of personal law?

- The government of Botswana maintains that Section 15 (3) as read with Section 3 of the Constitution of Botswana sufficiently prohibits all forms of discrimination, and such does not need to be reviewed. Any rule of customary law or of the common law which is inconsistent with any of the provisions of the Constitution, but especially of the entrenched provisions (such as Section 3 which provides the fundamental rights of equality), will and has consistently been invalidated and repealed by the Courts within the Republic of Botswana to the extent of such inconsistency.

Comment 6

Please indicate if a comprehensive action plan with clear time frames has been set up to accelerate harmonization of all laws and policies with the convention.

- There is no comprehensive action plan to accelerate harmonization of all laws and policies with the Convention however the national gender machinery monitors compliance with CEDAW and advises. There is a plan to conduct gender mainstreaming exercise in all Ministries which would address harmonization of the laws with the convention.

Comment 7

What mechanisms and remedies are available to women who allege gender based discrimination?

- Section 18 of the Constitution allows any person who alleges a contravention or a likelihood of a contravention of their rights as contained in Section 3-16 of the Constitution of their rights as contained in Section 3-16 of the Constitution, to make an application to the High Court for remedy. This means that women alleging gender based discrimination can at any time petition the High Court of Botswana to seek redress.
- The Government is in the process of piloting Legal Aid Botswana and its objective would be to provide access to justice to indigent Batswana (including women).

Is there an independent national human rights institution available to deal with issues concerning gender based discrimination?

- The government of Botswana had embarked on consultations towards the establishment of an independent national human rights institution in accordance with the Paris Principles which have since been concluded. The recommendations of this consultative exercise are soon to be presented before Cabinet.

Comment 8

Please indicate what measures have been taken to ensure smooth operation between the Customary law and Constitutional law in terms of practicing the two.

- The custodians of customary law are chiefs. The Ntlo ya Dikgosi ( House of Chiefs) structure is a consultative body that debates on motions presented before Parliament pertaining to customary law.
- There is also periodic public education between custodians of the two law regimes.

Comment 9

Please indicate if the draft National Gender policy which was under discussion has been adopted by the Government.

- The draft National Gender policy has not been presented to Parliament yet as further consultations and inputs had to be made on it.

Comment 10

Please provide further information about the level of authority of the Women's Affairs Department (WAD) located within the Ministry of Labour and Home Affairs, including in relation to its capacity to support implementation of the convention, its mandate as well as human and financial resources available to it.

- The Women's Affairs Department's placement in the Ministry of Labour and Home Affairs poses problems of authority of coordination. It has limited capacity to coordinate implementation of the convention. It operates with 33% of staff complement. WAD is allocated 2% of the total Ministry of Labour and Home Affairs budget.

Article 4

Comment 11

Has considerations been given to using temporary special measures such as the establishment of quotas or incentives, to accelerate the achievement of equality in areas other than Education and Local Government

- Yes, considerations have been given to using temporary special measures other than quotas. Women are provided with incentives in the form of grants to engage in income generating projects for poverty alleviation. The Ministry of Agriculture

Comment 12

Please provide information about any comprehensive strategy that may exist to create a socio cultural environment that is conducive to gender equality, including through education and awareness-raising targeted at the general public and in collaboration with non-government organizations and please include initiatives taken for rural areas

The National Gender Programme Framework (NGPF) was developed in 1998 to operationalise the areas of concern which are;

- Women and Poverty including economic empowerment
- Women in Power and Decision making

- Education and Training
- Health
- Girl Child
- Violence Against Women including Human Rights

The NGPF defines strategies for eliminating gender inequalities in each of these areas of concern.

The NGPF sets out strategic objectives, policy and programme initiatives that need to be taken to address the gender imbalances and each of the critical areas of concern.

Efforts made to ensure an informed citizenry that owns the gender and Development process saw the development of the following:

- National Gender Programme popular version
- Advocacy and Social mobilization strategy for the National Gender Programme

The National Gender programme popular Version grounds National Gender issues by clarifying areas that should receive attention. This greatly assists the reader in determining substance from trivia; thus promoting public consensus building.

The advocacy and social mobilization strategy for the national gender programme is basically a marketing tool. This strategy facilitates coalition and alliance building as well as networking. It also develops interest among stakeholders at different levels, to ensure that gender perspective permeates all policies and programmes.

Violence Against Women

Comment 13

1.1 What steps are being taken to develop a comprehensive strategy to combat all forms of violence against women, including the prosecution of perpetrators, providing assistance to victims and introduction of capacity building and awareness raising programmes for various groups such as the police, lawyers, health and social workers, the judiciary and the general public?

- The government of Botswana has passed the Domestic Violence Act; No. 10 of 2008, as a way of protecting women who are in a domestic relationship (as defined under the Act). This Act seeks to provide survivors of domestic violence with protection. The Act seeks to provide survivors of domestic violence with protection. The Act empowers Courts including Customary Courts to pass order (Section 7 of the Act prescribes orders available to applicants such as restraining order, interim order to name a few) which seeks to immediately protect applicants (victims); Section 9 (2) (b) (i) proscribes that the order shall direct a member of the Botswana Police to prohibit the respondent (the offender) from committing an act of domestic violence.
- Furthermore, women who allege violence against their person which is not defined in terms of the Domestic Violence Act can report such matter to the Police and seek redress by instituting criminal proceedings in terms of offences prescribed by the Penal Code such as assault, threat to kill etc.
- The Government of Botswana since its ratification of the Convention has undertaken various initiatives and activities geared at raising awareness and capacity building which are as follows:-

- Botswana Police College (the training centre of the Botswana Police Service) has introduced human rights training as part of its college curriculum. This training provides officers with basic knowledge in human rights.

- In addition the Botswana Police Service has recently developed a handbook with core principles which has been distributed to police officers throughout the country. This handbook, titled the Handbook for the Botswana Police Service Strategic Foundations and the Southern African Regional Police Chiefs Cooperation Organization Code of Conduct, highlights the importance of human rights and non-discrimination. Article 1 of the handbook stipulates that:

“In the performance of their duties, police officials shall respect and protect human dignity and maintain and uphold all human rights for all persons”. Article 2 states that, “Police officials shall treat all persons fairly and equally to avoid any form of discrimination”. Values of the Botswana Police Service also include respect for human rights.

- Prisons officers as part of their pre-service training are taught human rights issues and principles (including non-discrimination) at the prisons Staff College before they take up their duties as prisons. The training covers the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, Standard Minimum Rules on the treatment of Offenders, Constitution of Botswana in particular Chapter II, Protection of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms of the Individual, and the Prisons Act as well as its Regulations.

- Law enforcement Officials including members of the judiciary, lawyers, police officers and prison officers attend periodic human rights workshops in order to be sensitized o issues of human rights. These workshops are given by regional organizations (e.g., the Human Rights Trust of Southern Africa (SAHRIT); national NGOs (e.g., DITSHWANELO, the Botswana Center for Human Rights (e.g., United Nation Development Programme. The Botswana Network on Ethics, Law and HIV/AIDS (BONELA) organized a workshop (intensive half-day orientation workshop on the essentials of Law applicable in cases of Domestic Violence in Botswana), aimed at creating and heightening awareness on the Domestic Violence Act for magistrates of all ranks serving the Justice System in various parts of Botswana on the 4th April 2009. #### Comment 14

Provide more details on the Domestic Violence Bill which was under discussion. Has the bill been enacted and if so does it criminalize marital rape.

The Government of Botswana enacted the Domestic Violence Act in August 2008. The Penal Code criminalizes acts of violence irrespective of whether such an act of violence has occurred in a domestic setting or outside a domestic setting;

- It is for the reason given above that the Domestic Violence Act does not create new offences nor seeks to criminalize an act of domestic violence as such an act of violence has already been criminalized under the Penal Code;
- The Domestic Violence Act therefore seeks to compliment the criminal law by providing civil remedies to enable survivors of violence to have greater protection under the law while they await the criminal justice system to take its course;
- However, the Domestic Violence Act has created offences in so far as contravention of an order issued under the Act is concerned.

Marital rape is not criminalized.

Article 6

Comment 15

Clarify whether the law prohibits trafficking of persons. Please also provide data and discuss trends relating to cases brought under sections 144 and 145 of the Penal Code.

Section 144 and 145 of the Penal Code protects Batswana against cases of abduction of a person for immoral purposes and abduction of persons under the age 16 years. The police reported that they have never come across cases relating to the above mentioned offences.

Article 7 and 8

Comment 16

Describe concrete measures envisaged to achieve women's full participation and representation at all levels, taking into account the committee's general recommendations.

What awareness raising and capacity-building programmes or policies are envisaged encouraging and facilitating Botswana women's involvement in public and political life?

The government of Botswana is committed to the principle of equality between men and women and has taken some initiatives in particular awareness raising and capacity-building programmes to ensure women's full and equal participation and representation at all levels.

The Government allocates funds for the Women's Affairs Department for the implementation for the National Gender Programme Framework which mainly targets initiatives for women's empowerment across the six critical areas of concern. The departments votes allocation includes women's leadership training, women's exposition and gender development training which helps in capacity building. There is also an allocation for seminars and workshops which addresses awareness raising initiatives.

Article 9

Comment 17

Clarify whether Botswana women have the right to pass their nationality to their foreign husbands on the same basis as Botswana men have the right to pass their nationality to their foreign wives

The citizenship Act provides that foreign spouses to Botswana citizens acquire Botswana citizenship after a period of two years compared to the normal requirement of ten years. Botswana women have the right to pass their nationality to their foreign husbands on the same basis as Botswana men have the right to pass their nationality to their foreign wives.

1. The Minister may at any time grant a certificate of naturalization to a foreign spouse who is married to a citizen of Botswana and, has not since remarried and who satisfied the Minister that he or she is otherwise qualified under subsection (2) for naturalization in terms of this section, and that spouse shall, on taking the oath of allegiance, be a citizen of Botswana by naturalization from the date on which the certificate is granted.

2. Subject to subsection (1) and (3), the qualification for naturalization in terms of this section for any foreign spouse shall be that-
  - a. That spouse is resident in Botswana on the date of such application for a certificate of naturalization and has been resident in Botswana for a continuous period of or for periods amounting in the aggregate to not less than five years;
  - b. That spouse has, not later than two and a half years immediately before the date application for a certificate of naturalization, lodged with the Minister a written declaration of intention to make such an application;
  - c. That spouse is of good character
  - d. That spouse has sufficient knowledge of the Setswana language or any language spoken by any tribal community in Botswana;
  - e. That spouse intends, in the event of a certificate of naturalization being granted, to reside in Botswana

3. The Minister may, in the special circumstances of any particular case, waive or accept a shorter period of the resident requirements mentioned in subsection (2) (a) and (b).

(3A) The Minister may, where special circumstances exist, award citizenship to the foreign spouse of a citizen who does not satisfy the language requirement mentioned under subsection (2)(d).

4. Section 13(3), (4) and (5) shall apply, with such modifications as may be considered necessary in the case of an application for the grant of a certificate of naturalization under this section

Please provide data on the rate of teenage pregnancy in Botswana and the impact of teenage pregnancy on the education of girls.

Table 7: total number of dropouts in secondary schools

Gender /Year	2005	2006	2007	Total
Male	1535	3	1266	2804
Female	2628	1049	2248	5925
Total	4163	1052	3514	8729
% female	63	99.7	64%

A large proportion of secondary school dropouts consist of females as observed in the percentage female dropouts. The possible factors could be that the girls drop from schools as a result if pregnancy.

Indicate if Diphhalana continuing education project which was initiated as a pilot to assess the effectiveness and relevance of the readmission policy, has been renewed as well as describing any other measures taken to strengthen the activities providing pregnant girls with ongoing access to education (before and after giving birth).

Recommendations from the Diphhalana continued education project which was initiated as pilot to assess the relevance of readmission of girls into schools after pregnancy were implemented and policy guidelines were developed which are functional. The guidelines cover the following:

Primary education

- The pupils under 12 years will be withdrawn from the school and those aged 12 and above considering will be made provided there will be a written parental consent and there is a medical certificate
- Pupil will be allowed six months maternity leave and they will return to schools the following academic year

- On their return the pupil will be required to produce a fitness medical certificate from a doctor
- On their return from maternity leave the availability of space (including the school the pupil dropped from) will determine where the pupil will be enrolled
- All externally placed pupils have to abide by what the pregnancy policy in the sponsorship contract stipulates

Secondary Education

- No student will be withdrawn from school on account of pregnancy unless there is written parental consent and they are medically unfit to learn
- In the event a student is discovered pregnant in an examination year, special arrangements should be made to enable the candidate to sit for the examination
- A student who (impregnated another) will be allowed to continue with classes
- The student is obliged to adhere to the doctor's advice, and parents are required to monitor regular attendance of ante natal care
- Upon delivery and on condition that the doctor has certified the student fit, the student will only return to school after mandatory confinement period (4 weeks except during examination time where the certificate of fitness will suffice)
- The school should provide academic and counseling support for the student involved with the pregnancy. The school through guidance and counseling teacher ought to ensure that the pregnant student has work for the days she will be on maternity leave and parents should be responsible for collecting learning materials

- Any externally placed student who falls pregnant must immediately inform the office of the education attaché so that preparations for her return home (Botswana) to deliver can be made and such a student will only go back to school to continue her studies when a doctor has certified her fit
- All externally placed students have to abide by what the pregnancy policy in the sponsorship agreement stipulates

Provide information on steps taken, including temporary special measures to enhance article 11 of the convention which stated that members States Parties shall take all appropriate measures to eliminate discrimination against women in the field of employment in order to ensure, on a basis of equality of men and women

In 1997, the Government commissioned a study on Laws Affecting the Status of Women in Botswana. This study aimed at providing the basis for law and policy reviews to ensure Botswana's compliance with CEDAW and the standards set therein. Several workshops were held after the submission of the report in September 1998 to disseminate the results to the broader stakeholders. The report has informed the review of several statutes including the Employment Act. The act ensures equality of men and women in the employment sector. The act states that:

'There is no law stating categorically that there is to be no gender based discrimination in the recruitment procedures of employers'.

Before the amendment of this act the following sections discriminated against women:

- Section 115; prohibited the employment of females underground in a mine but it has now been deleted
- Section 116: prohibited the employment of females in industrial or agricultural undertakings at night without their expressed consent but the provision has now been deleted from the act

Comment 21

Please provide statistical information disaggregated by sex and showing trends overtime, detailing women's overall participation in the public and private sectors. Please include information on the wage gap between men and women for work of equal value

Between March 2007 and March 2008, all sectors of formal employment increased by 7.1% from 301978 persons during March 2007 to 323411 in March 2008. Private sector employment constituted 54.4% of total employment. Central Government and Local Government employment contributed 32.9% and 8.4% respectively. Parastatal employment constituted only 4.4% of the total employment during this period. (CSO Stats Brief: 2008) Male and female are recruited on the basis of merit and are also promoted based on performance. Please provide information on whether programmes to combat HIV/AIDS integrate a gender perspective, including the availability of antiretroviral medication to Prevent Mother to Child Transmission (PMTCT) of HIV.

Women are more vulnerable than men to HIV/AIDS infection. Interventions to address the HIV/AIDS pandemic are spearheaded by Government which declared war and invested heavily in combating its prevalence at all levels. The war against HIV/AIDS covers prevention through both male and female condom use and STI management programme. The PMTCT programme has become available in all public health facilities. The ART is also available free of charge to the public through public health services. By end of July 2009, 105,286 patients were on treatment in the public sector, of which 61.8% were females. About 6.8% of the patients were children.

The impact of the multiple interventions is reflected in improvements reported in the sentinel surveillance studies for 2005 and 2006. The prevalence among pregnant mothers aged 15-49 years has declined from 37.4% in 2002 to 32.4% in 2006.

The Male involvement component seeks to aim at increasing the involvement of males in Sexual reproductive Health matters and to contribute to the reduction in the transmission of HIV/AIDS and prevention of Gender Based Violence. The programme strategy is designed to respond to male/female vulnerability to SRH problems particularly in the light of HIV/AIDS. The vulnerabilities are perceived in three dimensions; personal, programmatic and societal.

Please provide information on maternal mortality as well as on the laws in place in regard to abortion, on the extent to which women may be resorting to clandestine abortions and how many such women die as a result, and on contraceptive prevalence rate and its availability. Please provide this information as well as information on the availability and accessibility of comprehensive sex education and family planning services in Botswana.

The causes of maternal mortality and morbidity include among other Haemorrhage, eclampsia and abortion. Unsafe abortion also contributes to maternal mortality. In 2007, 14% of the maternal deaths resulted from unsafe abortion.

According to the Penal Code Article 160:

1. Any person who, with intent to procure a miscarriage of a woman, whether she is or is not with child, unlawfully administers to her or cause her to take any poison or other noxious thing, or uses any force of any kind, or uses any other means whatever, is guilty of an offence and is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years.
2. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1), it shall not be an offence under this section if a pregnancy is terminated or an abortion is caused within the first 16 weeks of pregnancy, in the following circumstances and under the following conditions:
  - a) where the medical practitioner carrying out the operation is satisfied, by acceptable evidence, that the pregnancy is the result of rape, defilement or incest, and the termination or abortion is requested by the victim, or, where the victim lacks the capacity to make such request, by her next of kin or guardian or the person in loco parentis; or
  - b) where the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk to the life of the pregnant woman or injury to her physical or mental health, and such woman consents to the termination or abortion, or, if she lacks the capacity to give such consent, it is given on her behalf by her next kin or guardian or the person in loco parentis; or
  - c) where established evidence shows that there is substantial risk that, if the child were born, it would suffer from or later develop such serious physical or mental abnormality or disease as to be seriously handicapped, and the pregnant woman consents to the termination or abortion, or, if she lacks capacity to give such consent, it is given on her behalf by her next of kin or guardian or the person in loco parentis:

Provided that –

- i. the termination or abortion is carried out by a registered medical practitioner in a Government hospital or a registered private hospital, or a clinic approved for the purpose by the Director of Health Services; and
- ii. two medical practitioners have given their opinions formed in good faith, in writing, in the case of paragraph (b) above, that continuation of the pregnancy would involve risk to the life of the pregnant woman or injury to the physical or mental health, or, in the case of paragraph (c) above, that there is substantial risk that , if the child was allowed to be born, it would suffer such physical or mental abnormality or disease as to be seriously handicapped.

Woman with child procuring abortion

Any person who, being with child, with intent to procure her miscarriage, unlawfully administers to herself any poison or other noxious thing, or uses any force of any kind, or uses any other means whatever, or permits any such thing, or means to be administered or used to her, is guilty of an offence and is liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years.

Measures in place to support and alleviate the plight of women in poverty, including rural women as well as what is being done to facilitate their access to land and credit.

The Government of Botswana identified poverty as one of the key issues that inhibit women from making a meaningful contribution to the socio- economic development of the country. In order to address this situation the Women's Affairs Department started an economic empowerment programme that aims to empower women for their advancement in all spheres of development. The programme's objectives are to; alleviate poverty among women through economic empowerment; create employment for women through small enterprises; facilitate the participation of women's groups, NGOs, CBOs and women entrepreneurs in all activities that promote, expose and enhance their social and economic status as well as to promote collaboration and networking among women's groups, CBOs, NGOs and entrepreneurs with the view to strengthening market size.

The following National Policies on Economic Opportunities have been in place.

Citizen Entrepreneurship Development Agency (CEDA): Unlike FAP and SMME policies which had stated a commitment to women's empowerment by identifying women as a target group, CEDA has gone back to the economic strategy of being gender neutral. The requirement is that citizens should have business plans that are "viable, sustainable, should have the potential to add value to the national economy and should have a market for their products."

National Master Plan for Agricultural Development (NAMPAAD): This is the revised National Food Strategy established by Government to offer credit for agricultural purposes. Given that most farm producers are women this program empowers them.

Livestock Infrastructure Management and Development (LIMID) Programme

The program started in April 2007 and its objectives are to promote food security through improved productivity of cattle and small stock; Improve livestock management; Improve range resource utilization and conservation; Eliminate destitution by providing resources to the poor and to provide infrastructure for safe and hygienic processing of poultry products.

Through this programme poor resource farmers are assisted to purchase small stock, tswana chicken and to start guinea fowls production.

Integrated Support Programme for Arable Agriculture Development (ISPAAD)

The major components of the Integrated Support Programme for Arable Agriculture Development includes Cluster fencing, Provision of potable water, Provision of seeds, Provision of fertilizers, Facilitation of access to Credit and establishment of Agricultural Service Centres. The primary objectives of the programme are to increase grain production and to promote food security at household and national level.

Other Programs: Some NGO's and CBO's have specific programs that provide funds, technical skills and education for economic empowerment projects for women (e.g. the Global Fund, Women's Finance House, etc.) There are other Government ministries that work with women with a view to empowering them and these include Departments of Non Formal Education, the Ministry of Agriculture, and the Department of Social Services.

Women's Finance House Botswana (WFHB) was established with the vision of economically empowering disadvantaged women and developing their entrepreneurial skills. Its activities include savings mobilization schemes; micro loans for working capital and provision of basic training in management and accounting skills.

Young Women’s Christian Association: This was established in 1962. The mission of this Association is to develop women and the youth holistically by providing a forum for them to share skills and experiences through local fund raising to address their socio-economic and political challenges. Some of the activities are income generating and employment creating projects. YWCA also runs an adolescent mothers project that aims at readmitting girl children who dropped out of school due to pregnancy so that they could continue with their education. The project also provides some day care services to babies whose mothers’ have been enrolled into the programme.

Botswana Community-Based Organizations (CBO’s). Out of the 42 CBO’s registered with BOCOBONET only five organizations were owned by women addressing poverty and economic empowerment project, while the rest were community projects.

Women’s Cooperatives/Groups:

These are the Women’s cooperatives that engage in income generating products such as marketing of Ilala baskets in Ngamiland; collecting processing and marketing of various Veld Products (for example, Morula fruit processing as evidenced by products such as marula jam and Face products from morula oil; grapple plant or sengaparile (Desert Claw) in Kweneng and Kgalagadi districts, thatching grass and craft marketing country wide, bee keeping, herbal tea production such as mosukojwane), pottery; and salt production. Some of the women’s groups such as the “Kgetsi ya Tsie” have not only increased membership for example, from 9 people to 1000 but have also initiated a micro credit and saving scheme for the members. Other groups all over the country are engaged in the growing of vegetables, bakery pottery, etc.

Community income generating activities: In addition to the Women’s economic empowerment activities, Most CBO’s have engaged in community-based economic projects that have the potential to benefit women. For example; eco-tourism activities such as the Wildlife Management Quota system in Ngamiland and Chobe districts, the Nata Sanctuary, Community tourism e.g. photographic tourism, agro-forestry, commercial hunting through joint venture.

The Deeds Registry Act 1996

The Act was amended in 1996 to:

- Allow women, whether married in community of property or not to execute deeds and other documents required or allowed them to be registered in the deeds registry without their husbands' consent.
- Allow for immovable property to be transferred or ceded to a woman married in community of property and to allow the woman to form her separate estate, whereby a condition of the bequest or donating it is excluded from the community and marital power.

Ensure that where immovable property not excluded from the community is registered in the name of a spouse married in community of property, neither spouse may, irrespective of when that property was so registered; alone deal with such property unless he/she has the consent in writing, of the other spouse or has been authorized by an order of court to deal therewith

The Abolition of Marital Power Act 2004

The Act was enacted in 2004 and consequently abolished the Common Law principle of marital power which positioned the husband as the head of the family with powers over his wife including legal representation and administration of the wife's property. This was replaced it with equal powers of spouses married in community of property to dispose off assets held in a joint estate.

The Act made the spouses married out of community of property jointly liable for household necessities with provision for joint acquisition of other property. It has also abolished the Common Law principle of unity of matrimonial domicile and allowed married women to acquire domicile of their choice and replaced the domicile of dependency of minor children with a “place the child is most closely connected”. The act has equally abolished the Common Law position of the husband as the sole guardian of minor children and replaced it with joint guardianship of both parents.

Miscellaneous Amendments Bill, 2005

A statute Law (Miscellaneous Amendments) Bill has been drafted to align a number of Acts with the Abolition of Marital Power Act. The bill amends:

the Pensions Acts;

the married Persons Property Act;

the Matrimonial Causes Act;

the Administration of Estates Act;

the Deeds Registry Act and the Companies Act.

Please indicate whether the Rural Development Policy contains a particular focus on rural women such as to enhance their access to education, health, economic opportunities, land ownerships and participation in decision making process related to development planning including at the local level.

Access to resources and services is more difficult in rural settings than urban areas. Equally poverty is more prevalent in rural than urban environment. The government has put in place programmes to address these problems which impact more negatively on women than men. In 1972, the Rural Development programme was launched through White Paper Number 1, of 1972. The Rural Development Policy was revised in 2003 and has set out the basic principles guiding Rural Development in Botswana. Through the policy the government has undertaken to improve the services in rural areas and promote employment creation especially for women. In 1975, the Government embarked on the Accelerated Rural Development Programme (ARDP) to provide basic social and development infrastructure across all key sectors of the rural economy.

Please provide information on minority ethnic women, elderly women and women with disabilities on all areas covered by the convention.

Persons with disabilities are rapidly increasing. The most common type of disabilities is that of sight where defects in seeing account for one quarter of the total and blindness covers one fifth of the total disabilities. The differentials in disability between males and females show that the two sexes have similar types of disabilities. The major problem for both is blindness and the other common forms of disabilities for both sexes are deafness in one ear and inability to use both legs.

Comment 28

What is being done to address entrenched customary laws that impair gender equality?

State the relevant legislation that protects rights of women.

- The government of Botswana continues to undertake progressive legislative reforms to enhance the promotion and protection of women's rights; pursuant to this the Domestic Violence Act, Act No. 10 of 2008 was passed. This Act seeks to provide survivors of domestic violence with protection. The Act empowers courts including customary Courts (which have so been empowered by Statutory Instrument) to hear matters under this Act. This Act is a milestone in itself, since it means that individuals (victims of domestic violence) who are subject to Customary Law can approach the courts to seek an order for their protection.

- Furthermore the Court in the case of Attorney General vs. Unity Dow noted that customs yield to the pre-eminence of the Constitution. As such any person within Botswana can approach the courts to seek redress of any practice or custom that impairs the principle of equality.

Does Botswana intend to extend the provisions of the Abolition of the Marital Power Act, Matrimonial Causes Act and Marriage Act to customary and religious marriages?

- Education on the Abolition of the Marital Power is being extended to customary and religious marriages to sensitise the public on its impact on their lives.
