SHADOW REPORT

On
Government of India’s II, III, IV & V Combined Report on ICESCR

A Coalition Report of ActionAid in Partnership with 152 NGOs in India

Submitted to:
Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights

April 2008

ActionAid
R-7, Hauz Khas Enclave,
New Delhi – 110 016
INDIA
Website: www.actionaidindia.org
Executive Summary ........................................................................................................... 1
I. Right of Self Determination ....................................................................................... 4
II. Right to Work (Article 6) ....................................................................................... 4
III. Right to Just and Favourable Condition of Work (Article 7) ..................... 4
IV. Right to Trade Union (Article 8) .......................................................................... 4
V. Right to Social Security ......................................................................................... 10
VI. Right to Protection of Family ............................................................................. 11
VII. Right to Adequate Standard of Living (Food and Shelter) ................. 14
VIII. Right to Health .................................................................................................... 16
IX. Right to Education ............................................................................................... 18
X. Right to Practice of Culture ................................................................................. 20
Conclusion and Recommendations ............................................................................. 21
Annexure - I ................................................................................................................. 24
Annexure – II ............................................................................................................... 25
Executive Summary

I. ActionAid India works in 24 states and 2 union territories of India. We have more than three and a half decades of experience working on issues of the impoverished. Every five years we review our work and prepare a new strategy paper for our work in the country. Through this process of evolution and experiential learning we now work primarily with the excluded sections of the Indian population. We focus on dalits, tribals, muslims, urban poor, and most backward communities-especially the fisherfolk. We espouse the cause of women, children and persons with disability and in all our work we use the rights based approach.

II. We believe that the Constitution of India is a marvelous document, especially so far as the Human Rights of Citizens is concerned. The chapter on Fundamental Rights and the one on Directive Principles of State Policy taken together represent a high water mark in so far as human rights are concerned. In addition the instrumentality of public interest litigation accompanied with judicial activism created advanced human rights Jurisprudence of a pioneering nature even at the global level. In addition there have been innumerable pieces of pro-people legislation supplemented through a plethora of policies, schemes and significant budgetary allocations.

III. At the same time all the above mentioned achievements of the Indian State remain largely at the formal level and there remains a yawning gap between pious proclamations and the grounding of rights/entitlements. Even rights which have become highly tangible do not reach the hands of the most deprived and the most excluded and in this report it is this part of the story that we intend to share.

IV. We must clarify, at the very outset that we believe in the Rule of Law. We are proud of the democratic institutions like Parliamentary democracy, the five year election regime supervised efficiently by the Election Commission, the Executive led presently by a woman President and an Independent Judiciary led presently by a dalit Chief Justice. The ordinary people have always exercised their ballot with due diligence and often punished those who have forgotten constitutional promises and guarantees be they in the realm of civil and political rights or economic, social and cultural ones.

V. We have looked at the Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth Combined Report of the Indian State submitted in October 2006 to the Committee of Economic, Social and Cultural Rights very carefully. We conducted eight national level consultations involving a total of 152 organizations in seven different parts of India (see Annexure -I) through a process of intense participation. We explained the UN processes on the ICESCR. We jointly examined the Indian State report, took note of the fact that this report was submitted after a long gap of seventeen years, yet

---

1 Eight consultations held with different social group such as Fisherfolk (December 16-18, 2007), Tribals (January 8-10, 2008), Urban Poor (22-24 January, 2008), People living with HIV&AIDS/sexuality minorities (30– 1February,2008) Dalits (5-7 February, 2008), Muslims (18-20 February, 2008), Women (4-6 March, 2008) and Indigenous communities from eight States in the North East (25-27 March, 2008)

2 Participants included representatives from the Non Government Organizations, representatives from the Community Based Organizations survivor victims of violations, Human Rights activists, and organic intellectuals. Methodology of consultation included a three day consultation process, sharing of the international legal regime, sharing the India Report with small group discussions on each of the rights examining the violations vis-à-vis the social groups consulted. Women, children and persons with disabilities were addressed as cutting-across groups. A separate consultation with women was additionally held.
we welcomed it and went on to identify the gaps. We listened carefully to reports from the grass roots and took note of all relevant information and concerns that demonstrated violations and non-compliances, either through state omission or commission.

VI. A major finding of our consultative process was the discovery that the overwhelming majority of the excluded people of India are people who enjoyed the right to life through the deployment and utilization of their own skills, abilities and capabilities. They never depended on state sponsored largesse. They had their own dignified livelihood. Indeed their forms of livelihood not only varied widely but were experienced through myriad pluralistic forms of sustainability that ranged from access to natural resources, to common property resources, of the sea, the lakes, the rivers, the streams, the forests, and above all the land itself. They had opportunities for self employment through the use of their traditional skills, occupations, employments, services, vocations and other avenues of satisfying their livelihood needs.

VII. And then comes the state and through them, often indeed with them, come the agents of destruction. We are now referring to the destruction of livelihood in which the state is either a silent spectator or an active promoter. Sometimes the state does it directly and at other times through the instrumentality of private big business and their henchmen, especially the contractors and sub-contractors. They have consistently and in quick succession destroyed one form of livelihood after another without having any capacity whatsoever to create alternate conditions of livelihood that would provide even a modicum of human rights-let alone basic needs for human survival.

VIII. Almost every single article of the convention stands violated. The number of people impacted is phenomenal. A cursory look at the numbers is illuminating. The informal sector consists of more than 420 million people. As percentage of the more than one billion population the dalits constitute nearly 15%, the tribals 7%, the muslims 14%, the fisherfolk 1.2%. In addition there are the small farmers, the weavers and other pauperized communities and all of them put together constitute the overwhelming majority of India. A creamy layer of insignificant proportion out of this vast humanity has benefited from the trickle down but that does not substantially alter the demographic profile of the excluded. We examine in disaggregated form the magnitude of the crisis that has hit the underbelly of “Shining India” even as we march towards double digit growth rate.

IX. In order to understand the core submission of this report it is critical to understand that each social group experiences social exclusion for a reason which is very unique to that particular social group. Thus the dalits experience untouchability and discrimination and their greatest humiliation is through the denial of equality and dignity. The tribals experience unprecedented displacement from their ancestral homes, often deep in the forest with their own unique civilizational ways of living in harmony with nature as food gatherers or hunters. What they cherish very specially is their identity and respect for their customary practices and way of life. As for the muslims, the richer sections are in Pakistan and the impoverished are largely in India. Their affinity to India is constantly questioned by communal forces and their human security is so precarious that unprecedented ghettoisation is currently on-especially in Western India. The fisher-folk are under constant threat of eviction from their traditional homestead, despite laws that recognize customary rights and guarantee in situ residence without disturbance. The farmers whose agricultural operations have become unviable and among whom suicide has become a new epidemic.
X. The common factor cutting across all these social groups is that they were self-employed people. They lived with dignity and asked for little from the state. They now find that globalization comes along, destroys their means of livelihood, and the state sometimes pretends to rehabilitate them after imposing massive involuntary displacement, uses force, violence and even denies every civil liberty, causing unprecedented destitution, breakdown of families, pushing men into unfavourable migratory patterns, denying even a subsistence wage, exposing women and little girls to trafficking, starvation, HIV and sexual abuse and rendering children homeless, often on the streets and abandoning the aged and the sick to conditions of absolute poverty, insecurity and unquantifiable risk.

XI. Structure of the Report: The main body of the report comprising of 23 pages include all the articles from 1 to 15 examining each of the articles from the perspective of the different social groups. The footnoting includes references to relevant general comments, to secondary literature, including government figures, and to case studies shared during the consultations.
I. On the right of self determination

Without prejudice to the declaration made by the Government of the Republic of India with reference to Article 1 of the covenant regarding the words ‘the right of self determination’. We submit that

The Government of India must explore constructive engagement strategies in order to creatively explore peaceful solutions to conflict situations even with those seeking ‘self-determination’. The potential for finding solutions based on workable arrangements of “autonomy” as provided for in Article 370, Schedule V and VI of the Constitution must be productively fostered.3

II. Right to Work (Article 6)

III. Right to Just and Favourable Condition of Work (Article 7)

IV. Right to Trade Union (Article 8)

1. The right to work recognizes the ability of an individual and/or group to gain a living by work that he/she freely chooses and accepts1 and thereby live with dignity2. Right to Work also has to ensure the right of everyone to enjoy just and favourable conditions of work (Article 7), including the right to safe working conditions3. Further, right to work of an individual is inclusive of the right to collective bargaining exercised through the right to trade union (Article 8). Consultations held from December to March, 2008 with the purpose of understanding the economic, social and cultural rights vis-à-vis the seven different social groups4 disclosed an utter state of despair and helplessness.

2. Discrimination is a recurring phenomenon that the urban poor, dalits5, people living with HIV & Aids (PLHWA), sexuality minority and muslims are constantly confronted with in exercising their right to work6. This is in violation of the State obligation7. PLHA and sexuality minority encounter stigma, a far deeper discrimination, in almost every walk of their life to the extent of loosing their existing livelihood options. The Muslims, in the current context, particularly find themselves to be driven to ghettoized situation affecting their livelihood options with a complete collapse of their right to just and favourable conditions in work.

3. Experiences at the grassroots and consultations with groups shared about the destruction of their traditional and/or customary decent8 work in complete absence of an alternative economy to absorb their skills and labour.

4. Displacement from their natural and ancestral homestead (especially among coastal community9, tribals and muslims10) and from their settlements (urban poor11) is a regular phenomenon that the social groups are constantly threatened with, that

3 The birth of many a terrorist organization is located within the demand for self-determination. After many years of bloodshed, quite often the state and non-state actors sit together to explore political solutions which anchor around different forms of “autonomy” arrangements. When such is the historical experience world over, why cant parties sit together during the infancy of demands for self-determination and make serious efforts to find constitutionally sustainable arrangements for autonomy and thus preempt civil strife, armed insurrection, anti-terrorist armed state action and bloodshed unsettles their very survival. Family, an important first social unit for any individual that ensures an emotional sustenance, stands completely destroyed with the indiscriminate forced displacement that various social groups have been encountering. The dalits on the other hand in their struggle to unchain the caste shackles find it increasingly difficult to organize and challenge the process of alienation in the face of an imposing and speedy modernization process of their caste associated domain of work, particularly in absence of access to other forms of decent work that enables them to breakaway from the historical wrong. Women, girls and persons with disability from among the different social groups have particularly shared the current trend of being forced into either unsafe work conditions or have no access to work.

5. The State in perseverance of its commitment to opening its economy to the global market has insensitively pursued, through acts of commission and omission, policies, programmes and legislations that have pushed a large number of people, especially women, into the informal economy (unorganized sector, as defined in the Indian context), that is already bursting with a large section of the population, with unfavourable and unjust conditions of work and complete absence of social security measures for them. The State must take immediate measures in enabling workers, especially those who have entered the informal economy out of the need to survive and not out of choice, to enjoy rights of workers that is assured in Articles 6, 7 and 8.

6. The coastal community – including artisanal fishing community and women engaged in large proportion as fish vendors, including dalit and muslim casual labourers, have been at loggerheads with the State for having introduced retrogressive amendments in its policies as this violated their rights they enjoyed for generations. The Tsunami disaster of 2004 has been used as an opportunity, through use of coercion and fear, taking advantage of the helpless situation of the tsunami affected families, in shifting the coastal community farther from their natural homestead (the coast), to locations and houses that stand in complete contrast to their cultural practice. State parties have particularly to take caution of its non-discriminatory principle in its post disaster responses. It is also an opportunity to do away with historical wrongs and respond to situations guided by the principle of social justice and equality. A quick review of the State response post-tsunami reveals otherwise. Added to this is the imposing response by the World Bank and ADB in their support to reconstruction without resolving the local conflict of in-situ rehabilitation vs. off the coast resettlement, laying bare their vested interest. This is complete violation of the State Obligation to Protect through an act of commission where the State parties ought not to enter into any bi-lateral agreement or an agreement with International Finance Institutions (IFI’s) that fails to respect local concerns.

7. The coastal community condemned in no simple terms the recommendations by the M S Swaminathan Committee to review Coastal Regulation Zone notification, 1991. In complete disregard to the demands made by the coastal community the Ministry of Environment and Forests accepted the recommendations of the Expert Committee and the State Governments are wasting no time in executing the Committee’s recommendations.

8. Further bringing in a legislation, such as the Coastal Aquaculture Authority Act, 2005 is not only violation of the State’s obligation to fulfill an earlier order of the Supreme Court, 1997 but application of the said Act has resulted in promotion of rampant and unregulated shrimp cultivation in effect violating the fourth generation rights. Further unregulated enterprise of shrimp cultivation has left women workers who form a large work force in shrimp farms, with an unsafe and insecure work environment, exposing them to gender based violence. Failed attempts at organizing themselves into a union, is in fact a complete violation of the Constitution32 and one among the Core Labour Standard recognized by ILO33 and Article 8 of the ICESCR; thus the claims in the Government of India report34, stands challenged

9. The tribal35, in a similar way, are today at cross-road. Tribal life is today marred with extreme economic deprivation being pushed to the brinks of survival. More than 18,42,541 families are displaced in the four states of Andhra Pradesh, Chattisgarh, Orissa and Jharkhand with project affected people’s number 27,02315 36. These displacements are as a consequence of development induced displacement such as mining, industrialization, power projects etc and declaration of wild life sanctuaries, national parks, and reserved forests with weak rehabilitation and resettlement policies.

10. Forest dwellers and tribals are increasingly confronted with their inability to exercise their customary right over collection of non-timber forest produce (NTFP) as part of their right to work and livelihood option, which is basic to their sustenance and livelihood. Disregarding its own obligation to protect, the State has on the contrary restricted them for collecting forest produce 37 through a series of state level polices38 that usurp their right over the forest produce, thereby converting them into piece-rate wage labourer to contractors who exploit not only the produce but also their labour. The forest, which for generations has been under the care and prudent use of the tribal as a collective, has been deliberately and gradually taken away from their possession and use by the State through a series of legislations over the years39. The newly enacted The Scheduled Tribes and other Traditional Forest Dwellers (Recognition of Forest Rights) Act, 2006 that came into existence after a two-year long civil society battle between environmentalists and tribal rights activists, waits to be put into practice whereby the tribal get ownership over a piece of land40 in the forest. Rules formulated under this Act still await proper implementation. The Forest Department on the other hand, being confronted with this legislation has come down heavily on the tribal evacuating them from the forests under some pretext or the other precisely in order to prevent the new right holders from accessing their rights41. Juxtaposed against the backdrop of this Act that confers ownership rather than of possession of forests42, lies series of land related amendments made by state governments in usurping the protected rights of tribal over their land43. Such interventions by the State are pointers to the dubious intention of the State in offering ownership and later usurping it for third party benefits44. A relatively better and pro-tribal legislation, Panchayati Raj (Extension) in Scheduled Areas (PESA), 199645 suffers from state inaction to frame rules necessary for the operationalisation of the said law thus depriving tribals of the benefit of a law made by Parliament after intense civil society efforts. State’s active intervention in enabling the tribal to reap benefits of this Act An early and determined effort by the State in making PESA a reality will resolve a number of unclassified and unwanted conflicts that tribals confront with the Forest Department46. There is a clear shift in the development paradigm which is certainly not pro-poor, thoroughly market driven with the State aiding with the third party in acquiring land for the corporate despite massive resistance47. The National Rural Employment Guarantee Scheme, that had the objective of opening employment to build community assets is used to promote unsustainable land activities such as large scale plantation of jatropha detrimental to the interest of the people48; jatropha plantation is further promoted through the joint forest management scheme (JFM)49. Thus UN Declaration on Right to Development, 1986 that applies as much to the Indian State, stands violated as local residents are not considered central to the development process nor does the State feel responsible in creating conditions ‘favourable to the development of people and individuals’50
11. The tribal population would have secured their economic, social and cultural rights had the State actively not interfered in their way of life, but rather played a positive role of actively nurturing their rich cultural practices, intervening into areas of violation, especially those related to women51/52. In fact, Indian State must revisit its declaration to the Convention on elimination against Women (CEDAW) in Article 5 (b). Thus in the situation where tribal communities enjoyed a fairly adequate standard of living, the State through its intervention destroyed these and have forced them into a situation of exploitative wage labour, bonded labour, classifying them as violators of forest laws, dispossessing them of their generational rights over the forest in effect reducing their adequate standard of living, especially food and shelter, to a sub-standard, unsustainable, and culturally incongruent life-style. A large number of issues that plague tribal communities’ economic, social and cultural rights will be resolved if the Indian State ratifies ILO 169, Indigenous and Tribal Peoples Convention 1989.

12. Where tribal communities have been fighting eviction of various forms from their homestead, dalits and urban poor are fighting discrimination and indignity in exercising their right to decent work. Dignity in work is inherent to right to work53 and further to 'freedom of the individual’s choice to work54 where work is undertaken for lack of a suitable alternative and therefore not out of choice, dignity in work is best ensured when at least work conditions are just and favourable. In the informal sector, which has least recognition of worker rights, a significant approach to ensure relatively better working conditions is, therefore, through collective bargaining recognized in the Covenant Article 8. Domestic workers, Rag pickers and Sex workers55 that form a substantial women workforce in the informal economy have attempted to form trade union, but have been repeatedly turned down by the State56.

13. Destruction of livelihood without proper rehabilitation to continue existing business, has been a major bone of contention of hawkers, street vendors and rickshaw pullers.57 Zoning laws have been talked about but never adequately provided. All over the country, protests are being organized in bringing to immediate close the harassment meted out to vendors58 and against the destruction of livelihood by inviting the Corporate Sector into their traditional occupations59.

14. Migrant workers,60 a floating population of the urban poor enter the metropolitan cities in desperate search for work. Distress migrant workers suffer human rights violations on a daily basis.61 Not only do families suffer separation, but the work itself is ridden with exploitative wage labour in complete violation of the statutory Minimum Wages, with no provision for just and favourable conditions of work, especially for women and girls, who silently suffer sexual exploitation, lack of educational facilities for children of migrant families, use of child labour and other associated shelter related issues. Added to the regular woe, natural disasters further aggravate the situation especially in absence of adequate state response forcing families to migrate into further crisis.62 The State has made negligible inroads in mitigating the plight of migrant workers – a workforce that criss-cross the vast peninsula. Indian State has not ratified the International Convention on the Protection of the Rights of All Migrant Workers and Members of Their Families. Considering the vast migrant workforce, the Indian State should seriously reconsider its position and ratify the Covenant.

15. The right to ‘freely choose work and accept it’ is a key caveat to right to work such that individuals and communities are not forced into any form of labour63, either by the State or third party. In such a situation, the State party has an obligation to abolish, forbid and counter all forms of forced labour. Dalits64 in the Indian State most often are forced into certain forms of labour65 owing to their caste, thereby suffering unrevokable stigma. Manual Scavenging, akin to forced labour/bonded labour is one such abhorable work that is still prevalent despite the Employment of Manual Scavengers and Construction of Dry Latrines (Prohibition) Act, 1993, that had the goal of complete abolition of the practice. The State fails in its obligation to fulfil by a proper implementation of the law; in fact it goes to the extent of denying prevalence of manual scavenging. Further, no sooner the families, especially women, surrender the practice of manual scavenging; their children are denied scholarship in schools offered for children of families practicing unclean occupations thereby forcing children to drop out. Manual Scavengers across the country face a strange dilemma. Under the influence of IFI supported programmes such as JNNURM cleaning of nullahs, streets, etc done by the same community now stands in jeopardy. Community members are eager to give up the caste based practice, yet in absence of alternative work and with shrinking institutional jobs, they find themselves in a dilemma how to welcome this challenge. The State must enunciate a pro-active policy in this regard.

16. Very similarly, women members of the Bedia and Bachhada community in Madhya Pradesh and Uttar Pradesh and the Joginis in Karnataka and Andhra Pradesh perforce enter into sex work as a consequence of their being born to a particular caste. Despite legal provisions the practice of caste based sex work is prevalent in today’s world in its most corrupt form with girl children trafficked into sex work.

17. A substantial per cent of landless agricultural labourers are dalits. Through historical process of caste based alienation, dalits were denied access and control over land. A number of measures positively attempted in provision of ownership of land to dalits. A common complaint among the dalits has been allocation of non-arable land with very little infrastructure support to turn the given barren land into productive asset. Moreover, despite positive legislations, dalits have not enjoyed complete access and control over their allotted land, often exposed to conflict from vested interest belonging to other caste hierarchies. The State should fulfill its obligation through executive measures to ensure ownership and possession of lands by dalits thereby undoing a historical wrong, but here too the attempt has been half-hearted. Conviction rate in the SC/ST (Prevention of Atrocities) Act, is extremely low, indicating a lackadaisal attitude of the State and Judiciary in ensuring ownership of land to dalits.

18. Dalits also form a sizeable percent of the unorganized sector, as domestic workers, rickshawpullers, street vendors, hawkers and sex workers in the urban areas. In the organized sector, dalits enjoyed positive discrimination with a national level reservation of 18% as their right to development. The dismantling of the public sector units and further privatization of public enterprises hitherto under state control, have had the negative fallout of reducing job opportunities to the dalits. A national policy for reservation in the private sector is still pending with business houses unable to commit themselves to such positive measures, this further shrinks the opportunity for dalits to breakaway from their caste shackles by entering into formal employment with full protection of workers’ rights.

19. Muslims too, very much like the dalits, stand to loose the environs of a secure and protected work condition with the dismantling of the public sector undertakings, even though they share an abysmally low 4.9 percent in government jobs and 7.2 per cent in Public Sector Undertakings. Muslims, on the other hand also constitute a large number of self-occupied persons. Unlike the dalits and tribal communities who have faced the brunt of skewed development, Muslims have had to confront almost a nation wide trauma of being singly and actively stigmatized as a community leaving them completely helpless in being absorbed in other kinds of economy when their traditional/customary work suffered thereby making it more difficult for them to adjust and cope with the challenges.
20. Post 2002, Muslims are facing a unique phenomenon of ghettoization that is leaving them completely vulnerable to the insecure situation around them. Although, such a phenomenon is most prominent in western India, many cities in different parts of the States have also revealed the process of ghettoisation that is happening in a slow and gradual manner. Such ghettoisation has resulted in restricted work options for those in the informal sector, especially acutely faced by women workers. With a pre-existing low literacy levels, high instance of poverty and less representation in the formal economy, Muslims find it all the more difficult to upgrade their skills to other opportunistic areas or launch new enterprise as credit facilities do not come easily to them.

21. Another social group that faces traumatic stigma to its condition is People living with HIV and Aids (PLHA) and Sexuality Minority. During the consultations, participants from the affected community shared the trauma of being forced to leave secure jobs once their identification was known to employers and colleagues. The stigma that they face was found to be too traumatic to continue to work. Women living with HIV had to further face the trauma of forced eviction from their family – both parental and in-laws or desertion by their spouses putting their very survival at utter risk. They were left to themselves in not only coping with the ailment but even to fend for themselves.
V. Right to Social Security

22. Articles 6, 7 and 8 discuss how 93%, of the total workforce of India is engaged in the informal sector. The Indian State does offer a wide-ranging package of poverty alleviation measures incorporated in the Ninth Year Plans. In addition, there are elaborate social security laws, but almost all of this exist only for the Organized sector, which, in effect constitutes only 7% of the total workforce; the rest of the 93% are out of the purview of most of the social security benefits. The Unorganized Sector Social Security Bill, 2007 continues to be debated while the unorganized sector grows in number putting at risk the lives of hundreds of thousands, including women that occupy a large portion of this sector.

23. The Centrally Sponsored Schemes identify only three schemes, viz. National Old Age Pension Scheme (NOAPS), National Family Benefit Scheme (NFBS) and National Maternal Benefit Scheme (NMBS). Our consultations with the women’s group revealed not only the difficulty in accessing these schemes, but the schemes are implemented with a gender bias that keeps women away from benefitting. Since women have a shorter life expectancy, the age limit for women benefiting the NOAPS should be reduced to 55 years. NFBS does not recognize women as the head of the family thereby, depriving benefits of the scheme to the surviving family members/spouse.

24. In a situation where unemployment is on the rise and the share in the unorganized sector is increasing by the day, the Indian State should take proactive and sincere efforts in passing the much touted Unorganized Sector Social Security Bill after taking in suggestions from all the primary stakeholders. This will go a long way in providing succour to the already stressed workers in the unorganized sector thereby ‘guaranteeing them human dignity’ especially when faced with difficult circumstances.

25. As discussed in the earlier sections, the total number of days available for employment is seen to be fast declining. Increased migration in search of employment opportunities is discernible in all the excluded communities. This is accompanied with erosion of daily wage. Statutory minimum wage still remains an illusion. A “race to the bottom” is fast spreading. Any ill health completely destroys the delicate fabric of survival itself, when no social security measures are available.

26. The situation is further aggravated for the aged and the widows who are left behind in the villages from where the able bodied set out on migratory paths. A situation of utter destitution is starkly visible in all the interior villages, especially among the excluded communities. It is under these circumstances that cry for minimum social security gets shriller by the day.

27. In the coming years, People Living with HIV and Aids (PLHA) need a comprehensive coverage in social security. Increasing cost of Anti-Retro Viral therapy (ART) and limited number of ART centers requires them to travel long distance thereby, increasing their travel cost putting tremendous financial pressure on the PLHA in sustaining themselves. The recent announcement by the Indian Railway Minister of subsidizing railway travel cost of the PLHA is welcomed with lot of jubilation, but there is an equal worry of exposing them to stigma once their identification is made known. The Indian State will thus have to, until the society matures to accepting PLHA as part of their extended society, find innovative ways of offering comprehensive social security measures while maintaining adequate confidentiality during the course of implementing such new measures.
28. Persons with disability (PWD) out of circumstances of poverty, social category and other indicators, are also included in schemes for the general public. The Persons with Disabilities (Equal Opportunities, Protection of Rights and Full Protection) Act, 1995 Act has made legal provision for 3% reservations in all the centrally sponsored schemes, but field studies reveal that less than 3% of the PWDs manage to avail of this facility. This is largely because of the cumbersome procedure and lack of sensitive and proactive implementation with positive discrimination to the PWDs. As per the Act, PWDs are to be offered unemployment allowances ranging from Rs.75 – Rs.500. Field experiences do not reveal even a single beneficiary. A monthly ‘social pension’ for destitute PWDs of cash benefit of Rs.200 – Rs500 (varying from State to State) is an entitlement, which again has nationally an off-take of only 0.3%.93

VI. Right to Protection of Family

29. Family in most societies is seen as a nurturing and supportive institution for human beings providing warmth, love and care to each of its members. Large scale and indiscriminate displacements and evictions as discussed in Right to Work tear this tender fabric of family apart rendering its members having to cope with a plethora of tribulations that they were least equipped with. Alienation from land forces men to migrate in desperate search for work leaving women and children to cope with the poverty behind.

30. The Indian State recognizes family as the ‘natural and fundamental group unit of society’; family is primarily understood as a unit of heterosexual married couple with the man as the head of the family. But the Indian society has from time to time challenged the conventional notion of family being that of a heterosexual married couple with children. Time and again there have been instances of lesbian couples seeking marriage94, gay couples wanting to live together95, unmarried couples having children and such others, but these are not granted legal status as family and often face the wrath of the society at large, including other conventional families.

31. Conventional Indian Society by and large promotes, protects and nurtures the notion of a heterosexual married couple. In addition, the manner in which marriage is entered into is also defined, very few girls and boys are able to exercise their consent to marry96. Since marriage, in all communities such as the Hindus, Muslims, Christians, Sikh, Parsees and other religions, and indigenous communities, is defined between families of equal lineage, social, economic and religious status and not ‘merely’ as a decision of a girl and a boy to live together. Any attempt to deviate from the said path is met with dire consequences. Any measure to challenge this patriarchal notion of family has resulted in repression or violence against women. Further, family lineage is considered promoted only through the son; therefore the strong son preference, especially in Hindu societies. The State, in its patriarchal understanding of family, has also actively violated women’s rights through acts of commission97/98 in its attempt to protect its notional family size.

32. On the question of (consent of) marriage, the State in its belief in the patriarchal notion of family often guards itself from taking position to Article 24 and 25 of the Constitution thereby giving families and communities (often in connivance with extended State arms) a free hand to repress the right of consent to marriage99. Muslim women continue to face the ignominy of triple talaq100 and seek active abolishment of this practice of triple talaq that has resulted in women being abandoned and deserted without any support. This practice is outdated even in Muslim countries101. The customary laws in tribal societies are gender biased leaving tribal women completely at the mercy of ‘judgements’ by male members of the ‘Jaati panchayats’ (caste panchayat). Dalit women, especially devadasis, joginis and women from Bedia and Bachhada community, are forced into sex work through customary sanction. The Indian State must revisit and reconsider its reservation to Article 5(b) of Convention on Elimination of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW) as this would go a long way to mitigate violence against women arising out of consent to and choice of marriage. In the absence of State intervention, religious forces fill the vacuum, enforcing stricter codes of conduct that violates their basic human rights.

33. Women living with HIV and AIDS shared extensively the violence meted out to them once their identification of a positive person is known. The State will be required to take progressive measures in mitigating this before more women are made to suffer this.

34. Son preference and low status accorded to women in society have resulted in a series of violence meted out to women, both within and outside the family cutting across various communities, including tribal communities. This in effect has a series of violence meted out to women and girls. Civil society presence in India to promote women’s rights is quiet strong in utilizing the available democratic space to seek progressive measures. However, it must be proudly acknowledged that the State in response has enacted a series of progressive legislations that protect women from various forms of repression both in the private and public sphere. The implementation of these progressive measures need active monitoring and support by the State.

35. That a woman in India faces discrimination is reflected in the status that she endures in society. This despite the fact that she contributes more than her male counterpart in the state economy, this in addition to the double burden that she fulfills in domestic economy that finds no space in the Gross Domestic Product. The unorganized sector to which women contribute significantly, but with negligible social security measure, have nothing to fall back upon in critical circumstances, including maternity. The State in repairing this situation has to take progressive and positively discriminating policies that ensure a gender just society.

36. Families in a militarized economy lead a very precarious life. Security for women and girls is at its nadir. There is no limit to the human rights violation.

37. Status of children is a reflection of the wellbeing – both economical and social - of society. A conservative notion and low value accorded to girls as discussed in the earlier section, have stood as barriers to acquire competitive education to girl children. Growing economic insecurity in families has increased the per cent of child labour, thereby impacting on child dropout from school. This has further led to child trafficking of young girls for work, often exposing them to sexual abuse.

38. The Indian State has from time to time enacted progressive measures and amended existing laws within the current context, but there is a long way to go before it achieves a society free of violence and repression to enable children to bloom to the fullest.

39. Recognizing the children as the future leaders, the Indian State must refrain from any measures, through acts of omission or commission that mar a child’s right to development. Particular reference is the use of child soldiers in the Salwa Judum operations in Chhattisgarh in further violation of Convention on Rights of the Child (CRC) and International Humanitarian Law.
40. In full respect of the Constitution of India to provide an education system that respects the plurality in society.

41. In fulfilling its obligation to Article 10, the State should further refrain from forced evictions. These impact most on a child’s right to development\textsuperscript{120}. However, if justified in relocation, the resettlement and rehabilitation have to happen in a timeframe that enables children and women to settle to a normal course of life devoid of fear, insecurity and an unsafe environment with a privacy that a family must have\textsuperscript{121} without disrupting their right to livelihood and a life of dignity.
VII. Right to Adequate Standard of Living (Food and Shelter)

42. Right to Food is closely linked with access and availability to work, as right to work enables purchasing power such that no individual including women, children, old persons and persons with disability slip into a situation of hunger. Preventive measures for avoiding situations of hunger will require State Party to ensure adequate availability of food which is further intrinsically linked to sustainable ways of procuring food. Further the notion of adequate food or food security is intrinsically linked to the notion of sustainability.

> Claiming sustainable food ...... access and control over natural resources, including land.

43. Experiences reveal that relationships with land ranging from access to possession to ownership is critically important for dalits, tribal communities and women, as it ensures sustainable access to food and other needs without the need to be mere recipients of food grains doled out through schemes and programmes by the government. Where land reform is implemented, especially the right to homestead land, quality of life of the poorest has improved. Perhaps it is important to emphasize here that this one vital source of livelihood especially for the excluded groups such as the dalits, Muslims, tribals and women, is becoming increasingly remote. Land is a source of feeling rooted and confers dignity for most rural populace in India and where women have ownership over such land, it makes a world of difference. Migrant workers who travel in distress to neighbouring cities in search of wage labour reconcile with great difficulty the compulsion to sell their land.

44. Unfortunately the history of land reforms in India is a history of its non-implementation, except in Kerala, West Bengal and Jammu and Kashmir. Landlessness has been further aggravated by ever increasing displacement, including ‘development induced displacement’. Even where the impoverished have a small holding, there has not been enough support through assured irrigation, institutional credit and infrastructural support to make cultivation viable. Apart from all the above there has been a very disturbing trend of undoing legislative protection which rendered void all transfer of land from scheduled castes and scheduled tribes. In a nutshell the further commoditization of land and the neo-liberal shift towards market led land reform has aggravated the livelihood risk of the marginalized several fold. All this has precipitated a chronic situation of malnutrition, especially amongst the most vulnerable tribal communities. Large scale starvation deaths were reported from Madhya Pradesh and Rajasthan in 2002. The State response has been a consistent denial of starvation deaths followed by “safety net” measures to ameliorate the situation. A quick survey of these schemes to arrest malnutrition revealed a plethora of implementation problems, gaps in coordination, loopholes and poor intent in arresting malnutrition.

> Food entitlements – broken promises

45. The Indian State has in fact a fairly comprehensive food management programme. Having said this, it must be all the same acknowledged that the judiciary and Indian State have responded overwhelmingly to ensure right to food as an enforceable entitlement. Justiciability has certainly enhanced crucial elements of food security especially for the marginalized and excluded social groups. Civil society initiative contributed significantly to establish the link between right to food and the right to work situating both in the context of right to information. Judicial activism has also put in place a mechanism for monitoring food security especially among socially excluded groups, including old people, persons with disability, most vulnerable communities, women and children.

46. Although ridden with bottlenecks\textsuperscript{131}, the legally enforceable food entitlements are a great source of assured nutrition for the excluded communities that come into the orbit of such entitlements. Unfortunately such rights are far from universal. They materialize only when civil society organizations and sympathetic bureaucrats or human rights lawyers and PIL processes work in tandem and draw attention to acute deprivation. It has been seven years since the recognition of the said schemes as entitlements. Even before these processes could help destituted people to draw down the benefits, there are policy shifts that seek to dismantle India’s Public Distribution System. Public procurement of grains from farmers is sought to be replaced by private procurement and subsidized schemes like ‘Antyodaya’ are being withdrawn. Even before the expected results could be fully enjoyed, there are signs of amendment in the implementation of these, that almost defeats the very intent of making right to food a justiciable entitlement in ‘mitigating and alleviating hunger’.

47. Among recurrent complaints about the Integrated Child Development Scheme (ICDS) centers is prevalence of discrimination\textsuperscript{132}. Physically located at an inaccessible distance, location in the colony of higher castes who practice untouchability and appointment of non-dalit anganwadi workers who practice untouchability\textsuperscript{133}. Consequently children from the socially excluded groups such as dalits, muslims, children with disability, feel discouraged from accessing the centre. Offtake of food grains require proof of residence, but this has exactly been the reason why urban poor find it difficult to access the entitlements. It is ironical that the very vulnerability of the urban poor\textsuperscript{134} is made a tool to deny their entitlements. There are innovative initiatives, however, that show scope for replicability and thereby enhance off take of foodgrains\textsuperscript{135}.

48. Indigenous communities, on the one hand, have been raising concerns that indigenous food grains are not made available in the Public Distribution System, instead fortified wheat flour is distributed in the Public Distribution System in Gujarat; using Gujarat as a model plans for distributing fortified wheat flour in the state of Chattisgarh is underway\textsuperscript{136} paying little heed to the public outcry against adulterated wheat flour in the Public Distribution System. The Public Distribution System may perhaps be infested with a number of problems that need to be addressed with a pro-poor intent; dismantling\textsuperscript{137} this pro-poor outlet with a skewed wheat procurement policy under the influence of WTO is currently not at all the solution.

49. Very recently, there were attempts to introduce distribution of biscuits in the schools in place of hot meal as stipulated in the Supreme Court order. Vigilance by the Civil Society groups and representation of the Supreme Court commissioners condemning such a move encouraged the Minister for Human Resource Development to issue a letter putting an end to such a move\textsuperscript{138}. The States of Andhra Pradesh, Madhya Pradesh, Karnataka, and the North Eastern states have withdrawn Annapurna Yojana, one of the schemes identified under the right to food entitlements. The ostensible reasons for withdrawal, is poor offtake of the foodgrains.

50. All the above are pointers to a series of retrogressive measures by the State on such a crucial right. The landmark judgement of 2001 Supreme Court should be honoured and complied with to the fullest. And no tampering in the smallest form should be ignored.

\textbf{Right to Shelter}........... Uprooted and abandoned
51. Secure tenure of house without fear of being uprooted, enjoying a safe neighbourhood, having basic infrastructure facilities, located at a fairly easily accessible distance to place of work, are some of the adequate standards recognized as adequate to define a place as shelter for a human being. The poor and excluded live in houses that do not have basic facilities, yet familiarity with the location after long years of residence offers a certain sense of security. Our consultations with the excluded groups revealed that most of them are plagued with the fear of constant uproot.

52. In the last eight years forced evictions across various urban centres such as Mumbai, Chennai, Delhi, Kolkata, Hyderabad, Ahmedabad have taken place leaving more than one crore families uprooted and abandoned to fend for themselves. Urban poor have faced a unique brunt of middle class distraught of slums as eyesores, often having to make way for broad roads, flyovers, bridges, manicured gardens in general a beautiful city that does not have ‘ugly spots’ like the slums. Most often these evictions are undertaken at most inappropriate time when it is raining or when children are appearing for exams. Slum dwellers are never considered an important stakeholder to hold consultations, eviction notices are either left stuck on the doors without much information or notices are not given at all. Urban poor are now facing heightened thresholds of insecurity post the introduction of the Jawaharlal Nehru National Urban Renewal Mission (JNNURM) in about sixty cities. Eviction of urban poor has always remained a bone of contention and often intervention of the judiciary was sought. Until the early 90s the judiciary was pro-poor, but subsequent judgments leave the urban poor hapless and homeless.

53. Post eviction resettlement sites are further discriminatory. False promises about relocation at the original site have been dishonored, and forceful as in the case of Gujarat, leaving little choices for people to return to their previous locality.

54. Since the early 2000 there have been series of internal conflicts because of State omission or commission leaving a large number of internally displaced persons (IDPs) either in the wilderness of the forests or in inadequate relief camps. These relief camps show no adherence to the UN Guidelines on Internally Displaced Persons, which we strongly recommend the Indian State to follow.

55. Muslim community increasingly facing the phenomena of being forced into Ghettoisation.

56. Therefore, unless and until there is a clear rehabilitation plan, arrived at through participation of all stakeholders especially the people to be evicted, no form of eviction should be indulged in.

VIII. Right to Health

57. Grassroots experiences and the consultations disclosed that destruction of livelihood options that confronted the different social groups due to development induced displacements or forced evictions, as discussed in the earlier sections, had a direct impact on the right to health. Our consultations clearly reflect the intrinsic link that right to health has with the other human rights, especially right to work, right to just and favourable conditions of work and right to adequate standard of living, as effectively recognized in general comments on right to the highest attainable standard of health; violation of any one right has an impact on the right to health which is an extremely expensive indulgence for an excluded community.
58. Right to health is a basic need and a constitutional guarantee. Article 47 of the Constitution of India enjoins upon the State to improve public health. The Supreme Court did recognize health as an integral part of right to life. Right to food has also been interpreted as intrinsically linked with right to life, bringing the nine food schemes as entitlements furthering the cause of right to attain a certain standard of health.

59. The Indian State has been catering to the health need of its citizens, especially the poor and excluded groups through a network of health care system and staff governed by the Ministry of Health and Family Affairs. Since the 1990s, globalization and privatization have thrown the public health system out of gear forcing people, especially the poor and marginalized to run to private practitioners increasing their health expenditure. Health system of an earlier design needed regular review and improvement to cater to the needs of the poor and excluded communities, instead the Indian State used the lethargic health system as an excuse to introduce privatization further breaking down the system. Introduction of user-fees in the early 1990s took the poor and excluded, especially women farther from the public health domain. Further, distorted development in the country, not only removed people from an indigenous health system they were used to, but even the public health system was not equipped with.

60. In general the different social groups shared an extension of the social discrimination in the health sector as well. Dalits and Muslims particularly did not feel encouraged accessing public health system. Tribals found the health centres physically inaccessible. PLHA and sexuality minority encountered strong discrimination by health personnel. The Health system, including the primary health centres, community health centres and the district hospitals were found to be increasingly inefficient with low motivation amongst the staff.

61. The right to the highest attainable of physical and mental health is a vast area and there were extensive sharing during the consultation across all the groups, but we find it relevant here to restrict ourselves to a few areas of violation humbly accepting our inadequacy in identifying and ascertaining the violation of this right, lest we fail to capture the key strategic issues and thereby do injustice to the grave violations of health rights that the community must have encountered. We shall, therefore, in this section, concentrate only on a few key issues that are closely linked to the other human rights.

62. The coastal community, especially women, was confronted with an intrusive State where it incentivised women through a scheme who have lost children in the Tsunami disaster to undergo recanalisization. This was strongly opposed by tsunami affected women across and beyond the coastal borders.

63. Malnutrition and Hunger is increasingly a chronic issue with the particularly vulnerable tribal groups (PTGs). Over all the key survival indicators amongst tribal communities is very low indicating precarious health situation. The cycle of food insecurity especially among the PTGs across the country demands to be arrested on a war footing and simultaneously bringing in effective long term measures to surmount the crisis of recurring starvation deaths. The Draft National Tribal Policy, currently pending approval, is a progressive step that could go a long way in achieving the desired goal.

64. The social discrimination faced by the Dalit communities is reflected in their inadequate standard of living with most dalit houses situated usually in unhygienic localities thus exposing them to plethora of hygiene related ailments. Even resettlement colonies offered to them after an eviction are as discriminatory. This is complete violation of their right to health.
65. National Aids Control Organization, under the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare (MoHFW official Aids coordinating organization), puts the figure of persons living with HIV and Aids to 2 to 3.1 million. A total budget of 2574 USD is set aside for Phase III (2007 – 2012) of the National Aids Control Programme with the budget being pooled in from most International financial and bilateral quarters in adherence to the three-ones approach.

66. Participants in the consultation shared the need for enhanced allocation and increase in number of ART Centres and CD4 testing. Currently there are 137 ART centres in 31 States providing free ART to 1,18,052 adults and 8,347 children. There is a crying need for full coverage of ART centre as it puts those from remote rural areas in disadvantage. Participants shared that travel cost was heavy on their purse strings thereby possibility of PLHA, especially women, giving up the required treatment. The recent announcement by the Ministry of Rail to subsidize the cost of rail travel of PLHA to 50 per cent was met with great joy, but most expressed their apprehension of increased stigma.

67. Participants also shared the need for enhanced nutrition without which survival is at stake. This particularly holds good for women who have been abandoned, deserted and denied any share in the property rights. Most often, PLHA are forced to quit their job unable to fight the severe stigma. Thus, in absence of a regular income, acquiring nutritional care, a strong and essential component to support their immune, is distant from their reach. The poor and the excluded, such as sex workers, transgender, MSM and Lesbians fight acute discrimination and subsequently there is lesser access to the required nutritional support.

68. PLHA feel the need for substantive social security measures which is currently non-existent. Thus a strengthened health system with sensitive health personnel, a comprehensive social security and insurance measure to meet their required medical care and attention and nutritional support in an environment that extends and derives support from them will go a long way to heal the hurt that they regularly face today.

IX. Right to Education

69. Among the social, cultural and economic rights listed in the Constitution of India under the chapter IV dealing with Directive Principles of State Policy, (DPSP), the right to education occupied a very special position. It was the only right which was required to be implemented within a time bound period of ten years from the date on which the Constitution came into force.165

70. The Government of India made massive attempts in the education field. Over a period of time two streams emerged. One for the elite with further stratification and standards of education to suit each particular strata. The different types of schools for the elite which thus came into being are (a) International schools (b) Integrated Certificate Secondary Education (C) Central Board of Secondary Education (d) Sainik schools and (e) Secondary board schools. All of them were provided with more than adequate infra-structure, libraries, play fields, and a host of facilities for curricular and extra-curricular activities. There was no shortage of teachers whether it was for science, English or mathematics. Children who went into these institutions came out with flying colors and joined the elite of India.
71. Simultaneously there came into existence schools for the impoverished. Astonishingly enough seven hundred thousand schools were established thereby providing a centre for education within a walking distance of less than two kilometers from the residence of every child.

72. Unfortunately the overwhelming majority of these schools were multi-grade. They did not have enough classrooms, nor do they have minimum number of teachers required. There were no toilets, no drinking water and no basic facilities necessary for basic education. More than six decades after independence the same state of affairs continues despite public pronouncement of the state to the contrary.

73. Our consultation with the excluded social group brought to light the following:

a) Multi-grade teaching; (2) poor teacher student ratio; (3) poor quality lack of facilities for girl students; (5) acute discrimination; (6) Mid Day Meals; (7) assigning menial work to dalit children; (8) practicing untouchability inside the classroom.

b) Blatant untouchability continues to be practiced both during class hours and during the mid day meals.

c) Even Muslim students are subjected to discrimination, especially Muslim girl children. Such discrimination though different from those meted out to dalit children is equally alienating and humiliating.

d) Depriving tribal children of education in their mother tongue and compelling them to use a medium of instruction which is alien to them.

e) Discrimination of children whose parents are HIV positive and refusing education to children who are themselves HIV positive. Sexuality Minorities.

f) Many muslim parents reluctantly send their children not because they prefer madrasa education but because there are no functioning government schools in the neighborhood.

g) Children exposed to the highest risks of non enrolment into schools are those whose parents are forced to become migrant laborers.

h) Even worse is the condition of children from household that are subject to displacement.

i) Taking over of government school premises by the security forces engaged in anti-insurgency operations. The Govt. has also utilized school premises sideling the education of underprivileged children.

74. Against this deplorable state of affairs there has been plethora of civil society initiatives. The campaign against child labour, national alliance for the fundamental right to education, the activist intervention of M.V Foundation, Bodh society, doosra dashak, Centre for Child and Law, National Law School of India University(NLSIU) and others brought about an environment which demanded attention from the authorities concerned. An outstanding judgment of the Supreme Court in the famous Unnikrishnan Judgement converted a non-justiciable constitutional right into a justiciable one by reading Article 45 along with Article 21.

75. Even as the civil society campaign for fundamental right to education was gathering momentum the then government of India hastily introduced Article 21-A by amending the constitution. Interestingly enough the text of article 21 A diluted the ratio decidendi of Unnikrishnan judgment. Even more interesting, however remains the fact that Article 21-A although popularized was never notified. Yet the right to education became a fundamental right and remains so by virtue of the Unnikrishnan judgment.
76. In the meanwhile several half-hearted measures to craft a statutory framework for operationalizing the content of Article 21-A were made. Till today, however, no such statute has been adopted.

X. Right to Practice of Culture

77. Human beings derive tremendous strength and confidence from their culture\(^{186}\). And it is co-existence of plurality of cultural life that enriches a country or society’s ability to respect one another and co-exist tolerantly. This article recognizes the right of everyone to take part in cultural life.

78. Each social group we held consultations with, enjoyed a certain cultural life that supported their social and economic life. They also explicitly expressed the need to uphold their right to practice this culture. The following captures the onslaught on their cultural practice that many of the groups face as a result of cultural insensitivity, hostility, and sheer inability to appreciate the richness of cultural plurality.

79. The coastal community identifies themselves as custodians of the sea. But increasingly their identity is getting threatened with the kind of ‘disaster capitalism’ that is being promoted. Indiscriminate use of bottom trawlers and unregulated use of ‘modern’ fishing techniques which destroy fawning as well as the fauna and flora is causing irreversible damage to marine ecology\(^{187}\). The modernizers are blissfully unconcerned with the fact that global fish stock itself is finite. This in turn impacts on the fourth generation rights and thereby violates their economic rights as bursting sea is central to the bursting fishing economy.

80. The indigenous/tribal on a similar front are confronting an onslaught on their very identity with active State participation. Tribals have been coerced to adopt Hindu way of life, including dress, worship, social customs etc. in an effort to systematically Hinduize the tribal community\(^{188}\).

81. In celebrations of tribal festivals and customs, the State has actively interfered in hindering their full celebrations\(^{189}\). In Orissa, the State Government, in complete disregard to people’s sentiments entered into an agreement with Vedanta/Sterlite company to allow mining in Niyamgiri hills, a place of worship for the Dongaria Kond, an indigenous community of Orissa.

82. Yet, the Indian State finds it convenient in not intervening in tribal customary laws that is discriminatory of women\(^{190}\).

83. Indigenous knowledge of seeds and medicinal herbs has been completely removed from the custody of the tribals, instead their knowledge has been put to use by companies with active commission of the State in marketing ‘natural’ products making a huge turnover with absolutely no benefit to the indigenous people. Further with restricted movement of the indigenous communities into the forest\(^{191}\), there is complete destruction of indigenous seeds, exotic forest vegetables, herbs and roots of medicinal value. Non-implementation of PESA is a reflection of the State’s disrespect to tribal life.

84. The Muslims in India face a far greater onslaught on their culture and religion. This is enhanced extensively post 1992 with the demolition of Babri Masjid in Ayodhya. Opportunities are awaited to target places of worship for vandalism\(^{192}\).
85. There have been series of deliberate intervention by State Governments to hurt Muslim sentiments that have further made them feel insecure. Calculated attempts are pushed at saffronising school syllabus, especially history.

86. Series of legislation have been passed in different States to threaten and stigmatize Muslim communities. National laws such as Prevention of Terrorist Act, Unlawful Activities Prevention Act, 2005 have been used extensively against Muslim community. State laws such as Maharashtra Control of Organised Crime Act, 1999 (MCOCA), Chhatisgarh Public Safety Act 2005 and Madhya Pradesh Public Safety Act have been used to book persons who have protested against State repressive measures against specific communities.

Conclusion and Recommendations

I. The single most important contributory factor causing acute denial of the human rights guaranteed in the ICESCR cutting across all the excluded groups is the rampant destruction of livelihood. Reality at the grass roots reveals that this process is caused primarily through displacement. The nature of displacement may vary from one social group to another but the common factor is uprooting either from the homestead or from the occupation. Almost all the excluded sections of society are from the self employed groups. In some cases displacement has destroyed their access to natural resources, including food and even medicine (through medicinal plants). This is especially true of the tribal population. In the case of the Muslims their artisanal occupations have been destroyed and they have become bankrupt citizens. In the case of the dalits it is mechanization of agriculture that has destroyed agricultural work and accentuated unemployment. In the case of the fisherfolk, it is the threat of eviction from the coast line which destroys their access to the sea and their ability to catch fish. In the case of the small farmers, it is the destruction of sustainable agriculture and subsistence farming that is responsible. In the case of the urban poor, it is their continuous eviction and never ending peripheralisation from the city centres.

II. In other words all these segments of the population are displaced from their trade, or occupation or customary home. It must be remembered that such displacement is clearly destructive of livelihood, it breaks up the family, enhances risk of starvation, of non-education, of ill health, of unemployment, of acquiring deadly diseases, and causes danger to life itself. Women, children and the aged get reduced to utter destitution. It creates the condition for violating every single right in the ICESCR.

III. Even more disturbing is the fact that the magnitude and the scale at which this impoverishment is spreading is hidden from public visibility and the Government itself is oblivious of this reality. The government presumes that growth will address all these issues and chooses to close its eyes to the gross everyday violations of human rights. An alarming situation has therefore arisen causing widespread desperation and frustration among multitudes and this has provided fertile ground for insurrectionary activity. A country with strong democratic institutions is thus exposed to the collapse of the rule of law and it is in this situation that the Government must take cognizance of the emerging crisis and act in order to immediately arrest the destruction of livelihood of the masses. It is now well known that the rate at which job-seekers is increasing is much higher than the rate at which employment is generated under neo-liberalism. The excluded therefore have no chance of finding employment in the near future The solution therefore is not just a matter of budgetary allocations, but more a matter of safeguarding existing habitats, trades, professions and occupations.
IV. As a small step in this direction we wish to make the following recommendations:

1. Coastal Community:
   a. Their insitu housing and their customary right to keep their fishing gear on the beach and access the sea unhindered must be protected.
   b. Withhold implementation of the M S Swaminathan Committee recommendations, have a stakeholders consultation alongwith the primary stakeholders – fisherfolk, women, dalit and muslim workers, weigh the consequences and uphold the inherent values of the Coastal Regulation Zone Notification 1991.
   c. The Coastal Acquaculture Authority Act, 2005 must be repealed to uphold the Supreme Court order of 1997 (Jagannath Vs Union of India).

2. Tribal/Indigenous:
   a. The government of India must immediately halt the displacement of tribals from their forest lands and implement laws which already confer property rights and participatory rights.
   b. India must ratify ILO 169 Indigenous and Tribal People’s Convention 1989 in order to secure and nurture the rich indigenous culture and knowledge.
   c. India has nearly 507,000 number of Internally Displaced Families, who are languishing in poorly equipped and inadequate relief camps, Indian State must follow the UN Voluntary Guidelines for the Internally Displaced Persons to ensure dignity of life and take immediate measures for immediate return to their homestead for an early resettlement of the families.
   d. Ensure availability of millets and other local grains in the local Public distribution shops.

3. Dalits:
   a. Each dalit household must be allotted viable land holdings with support for collective farming along organic lines thereby assuring minimum food requirements for their families
   b. The principal struggle for dalits is their fight for dignity wherein they struggle to break away from the shackles of cast hierarchy. Ownership of land has been at the core of dignity for the dalits, the State can best ensure through a suitable land redistribution process, divert some of the existing programmes to upgrade their degraded land, ensure possession of land

4. Urban Poor:
   a. Their homestead must be permanently guaranteed through adequate provision in all the urban master plans-if necessary by revisiting them immediately.
   b. The Indian State must take immediate measures to pass a suitable Unorganized Sector Social Security Bill, 2007.
   c. Introduction of Employment Guarantee Schemes (on similar grounds such as the National Rural Employment Guarantee Act, 2005) in urban areas.
   d. JNNUURM in its current structure and manner needs to be revisited and a pro-poor and people centric programme needs to be evolved.

5. Muslims:
   a. All processes that create ghettoisation must be thwarted and recommendations of the Sachar committee must be implemented with immediate effect.
   b. The Indian State must repeal discriminatory laws such as the Anti-conversion laws, Communal Violence Bill and ensure Constitutional guarantees.
6. Women:
   a. All women must be enabled to acquire ownership of land in their names so as to vest property rights in them
   b. Indian must revisit her reservation on CEDAW Article 5(b) to arrest human rights violations of women’s rights, across all the social groups including tribal communities and Muslims.
   c. 150 year old outdated colonial section 377 of the Indian Penal Code must be immediately repealed
   d. The Indian State must have guidelines for the federal states to review the outdated laws for Devadasis and Joginis, and have a more forward looking policy/act that arrests trafficking of young girl children and redeems women from forced sex work. This should be backed with a substantial, gender just budgetary allocation

7. Children:
   a. All children must be able to access their fundamental right to education and for this all government schools—numbering nearly 700,000 must be made to function and all forms of child labour banned
   b. India Government must ratify Optional Protocol II of Convention on Rights of the Child
   c. The Indian State must find innovative ways of promoting education for all children initially in their mother tongue with ability to switch over to the regional language in addition to Hindi and English in schools (Ashram schools), promoting their culture, language and festivals, such that tribal children feel motivated to attend school.

8. PLHA
   a. Second line treatment through ART Centres be made available
   b. The PHC should be strengthened in order to effectively reach out to HIV and AIDS cases. Adequate treatment facilities including free diagnostic and treatment centres with necessary supply of drugs should be made available.
   c. Positive people should be encouraged to come together, form their own collectives and organize drop in centres offering care, support and solidarity.
   d. A special law should be enacted to comprehensively address all issues of the HIV and AIDS community, including an end to discrimination and stigmatization.

9. PWDS
   a) Indian laws dealing with PWDs must be brought into alignment with the international convention on disabilities ratified by the Government of India.
   b) special measures to create job opportunities for PWD in the public and private sector must be enforced
   c) Effective measures for inclusive education must be provided to all children with disabilities.
Dear Shri Azmi,

Please refer to your letter dated 4th September, 2007 regarding introduction of biscuits under the Mid-day Meal Programme.

2. The matter has been examined. After due deliberation, I bring to your notice the following issues:

(i) The National Institute of Nutrition, a premier institution of the Government of India and Food and Nutrition Board of the Ministry of Women and Child Development have advised us that biscuits cannot fulfill the recommended dietary requirements because biscuits (sweet or salty) are empty calories. At best they are snacks made of refined maida, sugar and hydrogenated fats, which cannot replace a hot, cooked meal. Moreover, 100 grams of biscuits provide only 6.5 grams of protein; this does not fulfill the nutrition norms. Food under Mid-day Meal Scheme. Adding 1.2 or even 3 micronutrients to biscuits may, in fact, create problems because humans need at least 20 known vitamins, minerals and other protective substances, which can only be derived from fresh vegetables and fruits and not from added chemicals. Chemical substances called micronutrients cannot replace natural foods; therefore, chemically laced biscuits should not replace a major meal of a growing child.

(ii) You will understand that it is important for the children to appreciate the local foods and tastes. Biscuits will only prepare children to switch to fast foods as adults. This, we fear, could hasten the onset of diabetes, and obesity in children. With biscuits in the school lunch programme we will end up de-legitimating food prepared by mothers everyday, a damage which cannot be quantified.

3. We have also discussed this proposal with State Education Secretaries, who are the nodal officers for implementation of the MDM programme. State Education Secretaries have pointed out that:

(a) There is no protein in biscuits, since it consists only of maida and sugar.
(b) Nutritionally, biscuits will lead unnecessary sugar in the body, and could lead to obesity.
(c) Socially, an important component of the Mid-day Meal Programme, is not addressed.
(d) Employment opportunities provided to cooks/cook helpers from the marginalized sections of the society would be lost.
(e) There is apprehension of violation of Hon'ble Supreme Court's rulings that only hot cooked Midday Meal is served.

4. I may add that the Commissioners appointed by the Hon'ble Supreme Court to monitor the implementation of the Mid-day Meal scheme have opined that any proposal for introducing ready to eat food in the form of biscuits or any other form would violate the spirit of Hon'ble Supreme Court's order and also irreparably damage the Mid-day Meal scheme.

5. In view of the above, I am sure you will agree that replacement of the Mid-day Meal Programme through supply of biscuits would not be in the nutritional interest of children; since it does not fulfill the nutritional norms, dietary requirement and safety of children and further it also deprives many intrinsic benefits that are being derived through the present pattern of implementation.

With regards,

Yours sincerely,

[Signature]

Shri Abu Azim Azmi,
Member of Parliament (Rajya Sabha),
54, South Avenue,
New Delhi-110011.
Annexure – II

List of Organizations Signatory to the Consultations

1. A.J.V.K, Vasai
2. Aabttay, Shimoga
3. AAI, Tirunelveli
4. Aamhi Aamchya Aatmasaathe
5. Abhaya, Davanagere
6. Abhaya, Shimoga
7. Action Aid India
8. Adventure, Bhubaneswar
9. Ahmedabad Daniswan
10. Akimbo Society, Nagaland
11. All India Trade Union Congress, Sagar
12. Aman Samudaya, Gujarat
13. Amansar Uday
14. Ambedkar Vichar Manch
15. Amol, Association for People’s Initiatives from Sundarban region
16. Ankita, Nalgonda
17. Annai Theresa Welfare Trust, Thoothukudi
18. Annasuraksha Sahmat, Gujarat
19. APDS, A.P.
20. APIL, Kolkata
21. Ari Susashan Sangh, Seoni
22. ARTS, A.P.
23. Arunodyaya
24. Arunthathiar, Tamilnadu
25. Ashray Adhikar Abhiyan, Delhi
26. Association for Social and Health Advancement, West Bengal
27. Astha
28. Bal Vikas Dhara, Delhi
29. Banchita Jana Jagran Adhikar Samiti
30. Bharatiya Muslim Mahila Andolan, Ahmedabad
31. Bhor Abhiyan Morena Society
32. Bhor Project, Action Aid, Sagar
33. CCS
34. Center for Health & Resource Management, Patna
35. Center for Integrated Development, M.P.
36. Centre for Community Service, Tuticorin
37. Centre for Peace and Development (CPD), Aizwal, Mizoram
38. Chesire Home, Chennai
39. CHSJ
40. CISRS, Bangalore
41. Coastal Community Protection Movement, Chinnakupam
42. National Coastal Women’s Movement
43. Commitments, Kosgi
44. Community Development Forum, Dhakuakhana, Assam
45. Community Development Organization Trust, Chennai
46. CORO for Literacy
47. Dalit Adhikar Morcha, Jharkhand
48. Dalit Hakka Abhiyan, Maharashtra
49. Dalit Handloom Weavers Development Society, A.P.
50. Digambarpur Angikar, Digambarpur
51. Disha, Ahmedabad
52. DMK Network
53. DMSC
54. Don Bosco Social Welfare Centre, Tamenglang, Manipur
55. Dr. Ambedkar Welfare Society
56. Dr. Shambhunath Singh Research Foundation, Varanasi
57. East Zone Displacement Project, Rayagada
58. Eastern Action Socio Economic Development Trust (The East), Tezpur, Assam
59. Enlight
60. Fisher People Federation, APSMS, Vizag
61. Fishermen Youth Welfare Association, Vishakapatnam
62. Forum for Fact Finding Documentation and Advocacy, Chattisgarh
63. Garima Abhiyan, M.P.
64. Gram Sudhar Samiti Sidhi, M.P.
65. Gram Swaraj Abhiyan, Jharkhand
66. Gramya Vikash Mancha (GVM), Nalbari, Assam
67. GSNP+, Ahmedabad
68. Guide
69. Human Rights Alert, Imphal, Manipur
70. Indigenous Peoples Foundation, West Chiang, Arunachal Pradesh
71. Indigenous Tribal People's Development Centre, Agartala, Tripura
72. Indo Global Social Service Society (IGSSS), NERO, Guwahati, Assam
73. Institute for Peace Studies and Conflict Resolution
74. Irula Tribal Women's Welfare Society
75. Jan Sangharsh Morcha, M.P.
76. Jan Sahayog, Bangalore
77. Janchetna Santhan, Sirohi
78. Langoria Sevabrata, Purulia
79. Kerala Swathanthra Matsya Tozhilali Federation, Kerala
80. Khatarshnong Socio Organisation (KSO), Cherapunjee, Meghalaya
81. Koli Yuva Shakti, Vasai
82. Lakshya Trust, Vadodara
83. Liberation Tigers of Fisherfolk, Puducherry
84. M.V. Foundation, Sirkali
85. Madrasa Alfaniyan
86. Maitri Network, Mumbai
87. Manipur Network of Positive People (MNP+), Manipur
88. Meetchi People's Movement, Tamilnadu
89. Milana, Bangalore
90. Mudda Bidur, Mangalore
91. N.M.W.W
92. National Campaign Committee - Unorganized Sector Workers, Delhi
93. National Coastal Women Movement, Chingelpet
94. National Union of Fishermen, Pulicat
95. Nazareth Mahila Samithi, Delhi
96. Nidan, Patna
97. Nirmala Niketan, Delhi
98. Nirman Majdoor Panchayat Sangam, Delhi
99. Niyamgiri Suraksha Samitee, Bhanwipatna
100. North East Affected Area Development Society (NEADS), Jorhat, Assam
101. ODD Foundation, Bhubaneswar
102. Orissa State AIDS Solidarity Forum, Bhubaneswar
103. Pragati, Sundergarh
104. Prayatna Foundation, Lucknow
105. Prathna (Sajag), M.P.
106. Peoples Research Society, Bhopal
107. Pragati Seva Samithi, Patna
108. Praxis, Delhi
109. Prayatna Foundation, Lucknow
110. Raithan Adhikar
111. Rathawal Adhikar Group, Bina
112. Resource and Support Center for Development
113. Right to food campaign, Davangere
114. Right Track
115. Rural Volunteers Centre (RVC), Dhemaji, Assam
116. Saathi Gotha P.M.S., Jharkhand
117. Samagra Grameen Ashram, Udupi
118. Samuhik Marudi Pratik Udyam, Padampur
119. Sarchar
120. Sarhad
| 122. | SARTHI, Gujarat |
| 123. | SEDEM, Delhi |
| 124. | SFIRD, Guntur |
| 125. | Shiksha Evam Vikas Sansthan, Alwar |
| 126. | South India Positive Network |
| 127. | Sneha |
| 128. | Sneha Abhiyan, Orissa |
| 129. | Society for People’s Awareness & Networking |
| 130. | Society for Social Transformation and Environmental Protection (sSTEP), Guwahati, Assam |
| 131. | Sopan, Seoni |
| 132. | South Indian Fishermen Welfare Association, Chennai |
| 133. | Sristy for Human Society, 24 Pargana |
| 134. | SRREOSHI, Durgapur |
| 135. | Tamilnadu AIDS Solidarity Action, I.C.W.O, Annanagar |
| 136. | Tamilnadu Meenavar Munnedra Sangam |
| 137. | Tamulpur Anchalik Gramdan Sangh, Kumarikata (TAGS), Assam |
| 138. | TCS-The Calcutta Samaritans |
| 139. | TMV, Kerala |
| 140. | TRUE-Tamilnadu Pondi Fisher People Federation, Vadakangulam |
| 141. | United Artists Association, Ganjam |
| 142. | Vanavasi Chetna Aashram, Chattisgarh |
| 143. | Vasai Machimar Society, Vasai |
| 144. | Vijayan Foundation, Lucknow |
| 145. | Vividha |
| 146. | Volunteers for Village Development (VVD) Imphal, Manipur |
| 147. | West Coimbatore, TN |
| 148. | Women for Integrated and Sustainable Empowerment (WISE), Jowai, Meghalaya |
| 149. | Women’s Research and Action Group, Mumbai |
| 150. | Women’s Rights Resource Center |
| 151. | Womens Initiatives |
| 152. | Youth Service |
Ordinary resettlement before displacement. In this case, if the Govt. succeeds in its efforts, the slum dwellers will resist. But again in Jan 2008 the slum dwellers requested the additional district Magistrate to look into the issue. The Govt. stopped its eviction initiative for the slum dwellers and a case has been lodged by Jhuggi Jhopdi Association. The slum dwellers have been living with HIV and AIDS and Sexuality Minorities. Eight consultations were held with different social groups such as Fisherfolk (December 16-18, 2007), Tribals (January 8-10, 2008), Urban Poor (22-24 January, 2008), People living with HIV & AIDS/sexuality minorities (30-1 February, 2008) Dalits (5-7 February, 2008), Muslims (18-20 February, 2008), Women (4-6 March, 2008) and Indigenous communities from eight States in the North East (25-27 March, 2008).

A percentage of unoccupied jobs reserved for Scheduled Castes: (a) In a survey done in 204 schools in 2 blocks of Bargarh district namely, Jharbandh block and Paikmal block, Orissa it was found that out of 204 cooks only 5 cooks were Scheduled Castes. Even then, those 5 were touchable Scheduled Castes. There were some eligible Scheduled Castes women for the post of cook, but they were not taken since they were untouchable.

(b) Mid day Meal cooks: Gouramma and Nagamma from the Self Help Group (SHG) were selected to cook the meals daily in the mid day meals scheme run in Upper Primary School of Annaram village, Pangal mandal, Andhra Pradesh. But the backward caste children (also studying in the same school) and their parents opposed and complained to Head Master of the school that our children don’t eat the mid day meals in the school as the cooking women are dalits. They threatened to put their wards in different schools, but SDEP project team and Dalit Samakhyaa’s intervention helped and now, both the Scheduled Castes and the backward castes children study and eat together.

(c) In the Upper Primary School (UPS) of Suryapalli village, Andhra Pradesh for the mid day meals scheme two scheduled castes women named Gunamma and Sayamma were selected to cook meals. After few weeks the strength of the children decreased from 170 to 70. Only the Scheduled castes children were taking meals and all other backward castes children shifted to Chandravancha school. Kosgi mandal as dalit women were cooking meals. So, the Head master of that school replaced the two dalit women with backward caste women named Suramma and Mallamma.

The ILO makes decent work as productive work in which rights are protected, which generates an adequate income with adequate social protection. Decent work, report of Mr Juan Somavia, ILO Director General, 87th Session of the International Labour Conference, 1999.

1 Article 6, Paragraph 1 of International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, 1966
2 General Comment 18, Paragraph 1 on Right to Work
3 General Comment 18 Paragraph 2 on Right to Work
4 ActionAid’s gives special focus to social groups such as Fisherfolk, Tribals, Dalits, Muslims, Urban Poor, People living with HIV and AIDS and Sexuality Minorities. Eight consultations were held with different social group such as Fisherfolk (December 16-18, 2007), Tribals (January 8-10, 2008), Urban Poor (22-24 January, 2008), People living with HIV & AIDS/sexuality minorities (30–1 February, 2008) Dalits (5-7 February, 2008), Muslims (18-20 February, 2008), Women (4-6 March, 2008) and Indigenous communities from eight States in the North East (25-27 March, 2008).
5 Shared during the Consultation on Dalits (5-7 February, 2008)
6 General Comment 18, Non discrimination paragraph 1
7 Ibid
8 The ILO makes decent work as productive work in which rights are protected, which generates an adequate income with adequate social protection. Decent work, report of Mr Juan Somavia, ILO Director General, 87th Session of the International Labour Conference, 1999.
9 Shared during consultation on Fisherfolk (December 16–18, 2007) Pulicat, the lake between Tamilnadu and Andhra Pradesh is a source of livelihood for the local fishermen. In 1985, 10 villages were evicted for Sriharikota rocket launch purpose. They were resettled at Pulicat. During rocket launching time, the fishermen are not allowed for fishing and they do not get any compensation for that either. On the other side of the Pulicat lake, Ennore thermal power station exists. This power station takes the lake water for consumption and emits hot and polluted water to the lake. As a result, the water level in the lake is decreasing; a lot of living beings are dying. There is not other source of livelihood for the fishing community.
10 Nawab Ali Sayyed is one of thousands of refugees who have been pushed into confinement in Juhapura. He does not have the nerve to go back to his house in Rakhial (a mixed industrial area). It was the first time riots took place there in 2002. His old home was closer to the city. He worked as a car dealer. After riots, his business is totally destroyed. His old Hindu associates don’t do business with him any longer. His new house is in a totally Muslim area. He feels his family is more safe here. But, finding work is far more difficult in the ghetto. Now getting even 10 days of work in a month has become difficult for him. He runs his family by resorting to loans from friends and relatives.
11 Shared during consultation on Urban Poor (22nd – 24 January, 2008) Tes Lal Verma Nagar, Patna has been settled for the last 35 years and is inhabited by 274 families. The Govt. gave a notice to the slum residents to vacate the place for the purpose of making platform under the Gaga Rail Pul Pariyojana in 2003. The Govt. proposed to relocate them in Shahpur, 20kms away from the city. Lack of employment in the relocation site has been the main cause for resistance by the slum dwellers and a case has been lodged by Jhuggi Jhopdi Sangharsh Morcha in September 2006 against relocation. The Govt. stopped its eviction initiative for the moment, but again in Jan 2008 the slum dwellers requested the additional district Magistrate to look into proper resettlement before displacement. In this case, if the Govt. succeeds in its efforts, the slum dwellers will face lack of employment without proper resettlement.
13 According to the 61st round of National Sample Survey (NSSO) the majority of the Indian workforce, numbering around 422.6 million out of a total workforce of 457.5 million are in the unorganised sector. (Construction workers, Street Vendors, Sex workers, Domestic Workers, Rag Pickers, Weavers etc) Some of the characteristics of unorganized labour are absence of fixed working hours, lack of security of employment and other social security benefits, low scales of organization, involvement of family labourers lack of support from Government etc, Second National Commission on Labour, 2002.
The Tamil Nadu Government issued an Abatement of the pollution of coastal areas and marine waters in a time-bound manner. Setting up of Institute for Coastal Zone Management to address the policy and legal issues. Inclusion of the ocean zone for regulation. natural and manmade hazards. Development along the coastal stretches based on the vulnerability of the coast, taking into account the Identification and mapping of the coastal eco-sensitive areas such as mangroves, corals, turtle breeding areas. Development of coastal bioshield.

Implementation of Integrated Coastal Zone Management Plan rather than an uniform regulatory approach. Development along the coastal stretches based on the vulnerability of the coast, taking into account the natural and manmade hazards. Inclusion of the ocean zone for regulation. Setting up of Institute for Coastal Zone Management to address the policy and legal issues. Abatement of the pollution of coastal areas and marine waters in a time-bound manner. Identification and mapping of the coastal eco-sensitive areas such as mangroves, corals, turtle breeding areas. Development of coastal bioshield.

The demands include a) The strict implementation of the original CRZ 1991 notification with immediate effect. b) That all coastal norm violations under the CRZ 1991 notification be booked and penalized immediately. c) That no step be undertaken to change coastal policy and norms without a process of due consultation with all stakeholders, including and in particular, fish workers and their democratic organizations. d) That immediate steps be taken to recognize and uphold the traditional and customary rights of fisher people to housing, coastal lands as well as sea and marine resources. Statement against Implementation of Coastal Zone Management . Petition submitted to Honourable Minister, Ministry of Environment and Forest, New Delhi by Kerala Swantanthara Matsya Tozhilali Federation, (KSMTF), 2007.

In response to the Lok Sabha starred question No. 160 Minister of State for Ministry of Environment and Forests replied on 22.08.2007: “The Ministry of Environment and Forests had constituted an Expert Committee under the Chairmanship of Prof. M. S. Swaminathan in July, 2004, to review and make recommendations with regard to implementation and amendments if necessary, of Coastal Regulation Zone Notification, 1991. The Expert Committee submitted its report along with the recommendations, which were accepted by the Ministry of Environment and Forests in April, 2005”.

Coastal Aquaculture Authority Act legislates that after it is passed all decisions of courts and tribunals in relation to the aquaculture farms are nullified, it seeks to amend and relax the Coastal Zone Regulation (CRZ) notification dated Feb 19, 1991 whose objective is to protect the coastal areas. All shrimp culture industries would continue provided they apply for a license within six months. On December 11, 1996 the Supreme Court of India announced a landmark decision with important implications for large scale aquaculture in India. The Supreme Court held that no shrimp culture can be set
The Nitish Govt. in Bihar has taken steps for Blue Revolution in the State of Bihar following the footsteps of Andhra Pradesh. But this has been widely opposed by the fisherfolk in Bihar. Previously, the local fisherfolk or their unions could catch fish from ponds, rivers and other water bodies. Now, on a flowing river putting fences and laying nets is prohibited so that fish by-catch (the very small fish fingerlings) are discarded by the fry collectors because their value is insignificant. The report states "elimination of fry in the fryby-catch is not only detrimental to the predator thriving on them, but it also creates an ecological imbalance". Moreover, the report noticed agitations by the environmentally conscious people of the coastal areas against polluting aquaculture technologies.

There are more than 1 lakh migrant women workers employed in the seafood processing industry, directly or indirectly, 2nd National Commission on Labour Report, 2002

There is a Way Out - The Story of Suja Abraham, National Campaign for Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organise Convention, 1948 (No. 87) and Right to Organise and Collective Bargaining Convention, 1949 (No. 98) are one among the Core Labour Standard recognized by International Labour Organisation (ILO).

Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organise Convention, 1948 (No. 87) and Right to Organise and Collective Bargaining Convention, 1949 (No. 98) are one among the Core Labour Standard recognized by International Labour Organisation (ILO).

Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organise Convention, 1948 (No. 87) and Right to Organise and Collective Bargaining Convention, 1949 (No. 98) are one among the Core Labour Standard recognized by International Labour Organisation (ILO).
government record by any department and forest as per dictionary meaning irrespective of ownership.

B. Jhum cultivation/shifting cultivation: The threat to the livelihood of indigenous people came after the deliberately withholding its responsibility of bringing in gender justice to tribal women while respecting their rights and forms an inseparable and inherent part of human dignity.

A.Jathropha cultivation: Representatives of the environment and forest ministry in task force meeting, 2007 upto 78 varieties in jhum areas and unique 4 tier farming system.

The recent protest are the incidents in Nandigram, 2007, Singur, 2007 and anti mining struggle against Vedanta and its Indian subsidiary Sterlite, in Orissa, 2005

The concept of self-rule contained in the Panchayat Raj Legislation (73rd and 74th Amendment to the Constitution) and the Bhuria Committee Report (for tribal areas) which was implemented through enactment of Provisions of Panchayats (Extension to Scheduled Areas) Act, 1996 (PESA) embodies to an extent the rights of the people over national resources in a broader way., S.R Hiremath Community Control
http://www.india_seminar.com/2001/499/499%20s.r.%20hiremath.htm;
The Panchayats Extension to Scheduled Areas (PESA) Act 1996 has made it mandatory for the State having scheduled areas to make specific provisions for giving wide-ranging powers to the tribals on matters relating to decision-making and development of their community. Technically, when the Act refers to extending the provisions of Part IX of the Constitution to the fifth schedule areas; politically, it gives radical governance powers to the tribal community and recognizes its traditional community rights over local natural resources. It not only accepts the validity of “customary law, social and religious practices, and traditional management practices of community resources”, but also directs the state governments not to make any law which is inconsistent with these

A.Jathropha cultivation : Representatives of the environment and forest ministry in task force meeting, 2007 disclosed that 10% of forest land in the North eastern states will be utilized for jatropha plantation. All the acquisition of community land through various backdoor methods like the World Bank supported Joint forest management is to generate revenue for the department either by carbon trading or utilization for jatropha plantation.

B. Jhum cultivation/shifting cultivation: The threat to the livelihood of indigenous people came after the Supreme court interim order of 1996 in T.N Godavarman case defining forest as anything recorded as forest in Government record by any department and forest as per dictionary meaning irrespective of ownership.

Different programmes have been introduced to discourage jhum cultivation. In the slogan of conservation and scientific management, traditional wisdom is completely ignored despite incomparable agrodiversity yielding upto 78 varieties in jhum areas and unique 4 tier farming system.

UN Declaration to the Right to Development, 1986

Tribal communities have customary legal practice that has a strong gender bias. By making a declaration in Article 5 (b) while ratifying Convention on Elimination of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), the State is deliberately withholding its responsibility of bringing in gender justice to tribal women while respecting their rich cultural practices of the community.

General Comment 16 Article 3 clearly recognizes that ‘obligation to protect requires States parties to take steps aimed directly at the elimination of prejudices, customary and all other practices that perpetuate the notion of inferiority or superiority of either of the sexes, and stereotyped roles for men and women’

According to the General Comment 18 Paragraph 1, the right to work is essential for realizing other human rights and forms an inseparable and inherent part of human dignity.

According to Human Rights Law Network (HRLN) there are 1.5 million domestic workers in India; according to National Domestic Workers Movement (NDWF) there are eight crore domestic workers in India; there are nearly two million sex workers in India, Centre to give licenses to Sex workers, The Times of India, 15th June, 2004

This Act recognizes right of ownership of tribal and forest dependant families residing inside the forest. The cut-off date of 13 December 2005 was decided for regularizing the encroachments of forest dwellers on forest land.

'Thether is ... one strand in a bundle of rights such as the right to enjoy, to exclude, to pass on, to share, to possess and just because one strand is missing the 'right to property' does not cease to exist as a jurisprudential category. Property vested with a 'use value' and devoid of 'exchange value' would accrue to the long term benefit of tribals. Such an approach would protect enjoyment of property without making it a marketable commodity. We know only too well – how many vultures lie in wait!

Pradeep Baisakh, Orissa’s Move to amend Tribal land law dangerous, India Together, 21, December, 2006

Indiscriminate use of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 further amended in 1984; a hurried Special Economic Zone(SEZ) Act, 2005 to acquire agricultural land at a time when the excluded are facing acute food insecurity, are indicative of a development paradigm in complete disregard to the citizens of the country.

The concept of self-rule contained in the Panchayat Raj Legislation (73rd and 74th Amendment to the Constitution) and the Bhuria Committee Report (for tribal areas) which was implemented through enactment of Provisions of Panchayats (Extension to Scheduled Areas) Act, 1996 (PESA) embodies to an extent the rights of the people over national resources in a broader way., S.R Hiremath Community Control
http://www.india_seminar.com/2001/499/499%20s.r.%20hiremath.htm;
The Panchayats Extension to Scheduled Areas (PESA) Act 1996 has made it mandatory for the State having scheduled areas to make specific provisions for giving wide-ranging powers to the tribals on matters relating to decision-making and development of their community. Technically, when the Act refers to extending the provisions of Part IX of the Constitution to the fifth schedule areas; politically, it gives radical governance powers to the tribal community and recognizes its traditional community rights over local natural resources. It not only accepts the validity of “customary law, social and religious practices, and traditional management practices of community resources”, but also directs the state governments not to make any law which is inconsistent with these

Dionne Bunsha, Conflict of Interests, Frontline, Vol 25 Iss 04, 2008

Dionne Bunsha, Targeting Tribes, Frontline, Volume 25 – Issue 05:: Mar, 01-14, 2008

Ownership’ is ... one strand in a bundle of rights such as the right to enjoy, to exclude, to pass on, to share, to possess and just because one strand is missing the 'right to property' does not cease to exist as a jurisprudential category. Property vested with a 'use value' and devoid of 'exchange value' would accrue to the long term benefit of tribals. Such an approach would protect enjoyment of property without making it a marketable commodity. We know only too well – how many vultures lie in wait!

Pradeep Baisakh, Orissa’s Move to amend Tribal land law dangerous, India Together, 21, December, 2006

Indiscriminate use of the Land Acquisition Act, 1894 further amended in 1984; a hurried Special Economic Zone(SEZ) Act, 2005 to acquire agricultural land at a time when the excluded are facing acute food insecurity, are indicative of a development paradigm in complete disregard to the citizens of the country.

The concept of self-rule contained in the Panchayat Raj Legislation (73rd and 74th Amendment to the Constitution) and the Bhuria Committee Report (for tribal areas) which was implemented through enactment of Provisions of Panchayats (Extension to Scheduled Areas) Act, 1996 (PESA) embodies to an extent the rights of the people over national resources in a broader way., S.R Hiremath Community Control
http://www.india_seminar.com/2001/499/499%20s.r.%20hiremath.htm;
The Panchayats Extension to Scheduled Areas (PESA) Act 1996 has made it mandatory for the State having scheduled areas to make specific provisions for giving wide-ranging powers to the tribals on matters relating to decision-making and development of their community. Technically, when the Act refers to extending the provisions of Part IX of the Constitution to the fifth schedule areas; politically, it gives radical governance powers to the tribal community and recognizes its traditional community rights over local natural resources. It not only accepts the validity of “customary law, social and religious practices, and traditional management practices of community resources”, but also directs the state governments not to make any law which is inconsistent with these

50  UN Declaration to the Right to Development, 1986

51 Tribal communities have customary legal practice that has a strong gender bias. By making a declaration in Article 5 (b) while ratifying Convention on Elimination of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), the State is deliberately withholding its responsibility of bringing in gender justice to tribal women while respecting their rich cultural practices of the community.

52 General Comment 16 Article 3 clearly recognizes that ‘obligation to protect requires States parties to take steps aimed directly at the elimination of prejudices, customary and all other practices that perpetuate the notion of inferiority or superiority of either of the sexes, and stereotyped roles for men and women’

53 According to the General Comment 18 Paragraph 1, the right to work is essential for realizing other human rights and forms an inseparable and inherent part of human dignity.

54 General Comment 18 on Right to Work.

55 According to Human Rights Law Network (HRLN) there are 1.5 million domestic workers in India; according to National Domestic Workers Movement (NDWF) there are eight crore domestic workers in India; there are nearly two million sex workers in India, Centre to give licenses to Sex workers, The Times of India, 15th June, 2004
Lal Miyan, a 30 year old migrant from Assam to Delhi has been staying in Rangpuri Pahadi for the last two years and was working as a ragpicker when he found no other work. One day while he was picking rags, a policeman asked him on whose permission was he picking rag from that area. When Lal Miyan said that he picks up rag from the same place everyday and cleans that area, the policeman was furious and took away his rickshaw. The NGO Bal Vikas Dhara’s officials. policeman asked him on whose permission was he picking rag from that area. When Lal Miyan said that he picks up rag from the same place everyday and cleans that area, the policeman was furious and took away his rickshaw. The NGO Bal Vikas Dhara’s officials.

Experience sharing during shadow report consultation with Urban Poor (January 22-24th, 2008)

(a) Domestic workers
Kavita, a 14 year old girl hailing from Chattisgarh district was placed in a house as a domestic worker by the employer asked her to stay and work at his sister’s place. There she was ill treated, scolded frequently and did not get food properly. She asked her employer to send her home persistently. She did not let her go, but one day she brought another girl for work and sent Kavita back without paying her for the six months she worked there.

(b) Rag pickers
Lal Miyan, a 30 year old migrant from Assam to Delhi has been staying in Rangpuri Pahadi for the last two years and was working as a ragpicker when he found no other work. One day while he was picking rags, a policeman asked him on whose permission was he picking rag from that area. When Lal Miyan said that he picks up rag from the same place everyday and cleans that area, the policeman was furious and took away his rickshaw and locked it in a godown saying that he will return it only if Lal gives him Rs.5000. This case shows the harassment faced by the rag pickers. Lal Miyan’s rickshaw was returned back by the intervention of the NGO Bal Vikas Dhara’s officials.

Experience sharing during shadow report consultation with Urban Poor (January 22-23, 2008)

(a) Domestic workers
Kavita, a 14 year old girl hailing from Chattisgarh district was placed in a house as a domestic worker by the employer asked her to stay and work at his sister’s place. There she was ill treated, scolded frequently and did not get food properly. She asked her employer to send her home persistently. She did not let her go, but one day she brought another girl for work and sent Kavita back without paying her for the six months she worked there.

(b) Rag pickers
Lal Miyan, a 30 year old migrant from Assam to Delhi has been staying in Rangpuri Pahadi for the last two years and was working as a ragpicker when he found no other work. One day while he was picking rags, a policeman asked him on whose permission was he picking rag from that area. When Lal Miyan said that he picks up rag from the same place everyday and cleans that area, the policeman was furious and took away his rickshaw and locked it in a godown saying that he will return it only if Lal gives him Rs.5000. This case shows the harassment faced by the rag pickers. Lal Miyan’s rickshaw was returned back by the intervention of the NGO Bal Vikas Dhara’s officials.

Experience sharing during shadow report consultation with Urban Poor (January 22-23, 2008)

(a) Domestic workers
Kavita, a 14 year old girl hailing from Chattisgarh district was placed in a house as a domestic worker by the employer asked her to stay and work at his sister’s place. There she was ill treated, scolded frequently and did not get food properly. She asked her employer to send her home persistently. She did not let her go, but one day she brought another girl for work and sent Kavita back without paying her for the six months she worked there.

(b) Rag pickers
Lal Miyan, a 30 year old migrant from Assam to Delhi has been staying in Rangpuri Pahadi for the last two years and was working as a ragpicker when he found no other work. One day while he was picking rags, a policeman asked him on whose permission was he picking rag from that area. When Lal Miyan said that he picks up rag from the same place everyday and cleans that area, the policeman was furious and took away his rickshaw and locked it in a godown saying that he will return it only if Lal gives him Rs.5000. This case shows the harassment faced by the rag pickers. Lal Miyan’s rickshaw was returned back by the intervention of the NGO Bal Vikas Dhara’s officials.

The 2002 drought in Bolangir district of Orissa had resulted in many families enter into bonded labour as brick kiln workers turning them into seasonal migrants from Orissa to Andhra Pradesh. http://www.reflect-action.org/Initiatives/ict/project/country/india/india-framework.htm#scenario ILO defines Forced Labour as ‘all work or service which is exacted from any person under the menace of any penalty and for which the said person has not offered himself voluntarily’.

The word ‘Dalit’ literally means poor and ‘oppressed’ person. But it has acquired a new cultural connotation to mean ‘those who have been broken, ground down by those above them in deliberate and active way’ Zeliot, E, Dalit – New Cultural Context of an Old Marathi Word’ In C Malonet ed Language and Civilisation change in South Asia, Vol XI, ’Contribution to Asian Studies, 1978

Oirissa Goti Mukti Andolan demands the traditional drum beaters in a village to be recognized as bonded labourers and be given the right to live on the land they have been staying for generations. In Gorsal panchayat of Puri district, the drum beaters in the temple belong to pano families and they beat drums solely as a customary obligation without any remuneration or wage. They beat drums every evening for an hour even after a day’s toil. Under the leadership of Ramachandra Naik, these drum beaters refused to beat drums anymore. The non-dalits were aghast and asked these pano families to vacate their homestead land as this was temple land and given to them for drumbeating purpose. Around 200 non-dalits under the leadership of Bidyadhar Swain ransacked their houses. Now, the Orissa Goti Mukti Andolan demands recognition of their work as bonded labour and freedom from such bonded labour without loosing their homestead lands. They are also demanding compensation for the loss of their valuables and punishment to the accused. On the other hand, Koraga Community who belong to the particularly vulnerable groups in Karnataka have been made to practice Ajal(Set of demeaning practices which further the subhuman living conditions of Koraga) by the upper caste community. The Koraga’s are made to eat the left over food, mixed with nails, cut hair pieces and even the spit of the person suffering from fatal diseases, the Koraga’s women have to feed the upper caste babies suffering from any chronic disease to get the disease transferred to themselves, Koraga’s women must get Panchama Dhana (five alms), when the person of upper caste is experiencing difficulty or suffering from unknown diseases. The person who is undergoing trouble would give used clothes, left over of food eaten, oil, hair and nail to Koraga women. The belief again is that impurities would pass on to koragas and the upper caste will get bliss. This practice is yet to be wiped out completely in spite of the Ajal Abolition Act in force since 2000.

(a) Shared during the consultation with Dalits (February 5-7th, 2008) Lalli bai wife of Kanhaiyalal of Dhariakhedi village of Madhya Pradesh got married at the age of 13 and got into manual scavenging as a family occupation. She had to go to 30 to 35 houses to clean and carry human waste to earn livelihood. Besides she had to do her household work and due to overwork and lack of hygienic conditions she got severe skin disease. She sought medical treatment at several places but it was of no use and she was thrown out of her house by her husband. During this period she came in contact with Garima Abhiyaan of Madhya Pradesh and by persuasion quit the manual scavenging work. Subsequently she recovered and started working for Garima Abhiyaan as a volunteer.(b) There are 8 millions Manual scavengers in India, Ghansham Shah et al, Untouchability in Rural India, Sage, 2006

State government’s response to Supreme Court’s query on prevalence of MS writ petition (civil) No. 583/2003

More than 95% of those engaged in Manual Scavengers are women, Garima Abhiyaan, Madhya Pradesh.

Pre-matric scholarship for children of families practicing manual scavenging.

Although privatization of sanitation is breaking the caste ridden practice by bringing in involvement of members from other castes, ironically it is the contract of cleaning that goes to other castes while the primary cleaners continue to remain from the scavenging community. While they were previously accountable to the State as their employer and enjoyed certain benefits of a worker, the current practice has reduced them to execute the labour of the women without any social security measures or any status of a worker.

Panchayat Officer (BPDO) to enquire into the matter of irregularities in the auction of village common land rights in South Tamil Nadu, http://www.hrfdl.org.in/defense_of_dalit.html

These lands were recovered, the life of all dalits would have improved. The realities and defense of human Hindus. However, the laws to return all these lands of Dalits were really in favor of the High Caste Hindus. If all

(b) Punjab village Common Land Act provides exclusive rights to Dalits on 1/3rd of the village land.

In this context, we have to remind about the allocation of lands by the British Authorities to Dalits. As per July 1892 Movement of British Parliament, laks and lakhs of promboke lands, D.C lands also known as ‘panchami’ land that had been earmarked and allocated for Dalits were now under the occupation of High Caste Hindus. However, the laws to return all these lands of Dalits were really in favor of the High Caste Hindus. If all these lands were recovered, the life of all dalits would have improved. The realities and defense of human rights in South Tamil Nadu, http://www.hrfdl.org.in/defense_of_dalit.html

Shadow report consultation Dalits, (5-7th, February) (a) Basudeipur, a village in Orissa has 44 households and of these households, three are dalit households. One such dalit household is headed by Manas Sethi. According to Orissa Government policy every landless is supposed to get 4 decimals of land in the village. If the villagers give no objection for such grant. After Manas got 4 decimals of land in the outskirts of the village from the Government a person belonging to upper caste of that village occupied the land. Seeing that an upper caste person has occupied the land, the villagers objected to the Government land grant to Manas. Then, the villagers socially restricted Manas from visiting the village. Manas and two other dalit families were also restricted for taking water from the tube well.

(b) Punjab Village Common Land Act provides exclusive rights to Dalits on 1/3rd of the village land, which does not happen as “upper” castes do not allow this. Volunteers for Social Justice (VSI) demanded execution of this Act and lodged a formal complaint to the Deputy Commissioner, Patiala who appointed a Block Development Panchayat Officer (BPDO) to enquire into the matter of irregularities in the auction of village common land reserved for the Dalits and cancelled the auctions calling for fresh and fair auction of the village common land for cultivation purpose. They have now launched a mass awareness campaign on the issue. Annual Report 2007, ActionAid International –India, 2008 at 17 welfare schemes for unorganized sector workers. Every worker shall be registered by the district administration boards at the state and central levels to advise and assist in formulating, implementing and monitoring social schemes for children, skill upgradation of workers, funeral assistance and old age homes. This bill establishes formulate welfare schemes related to the provident fund, employment injury benefits, housing, educational benefits, old age protection, and any other benefit decided by the government. The state government may different sections of unorganized sector workers regarding life and disability cover health and maternity.

1. Anita Das, a domestic worker, is a mother of three children. Her husband is a construction worker. She stays the rights of people of unorganized sector took up the issue and asked the contractor to pay compensation. The last 15 days, ie Rs. 500. Society for Social Transformation and Environment Protection (STEP), working for down and fractured his left leg. Contractor did not pay a penny for the treatment but instead paid the wage for in the Six-mile area of Guwahati city. Her husband while painting a hostel wall of veterinary college has fallen outside their ghetto. Increased and concentrated workforce in the ghetto allowed limited work for everyone.

3. Draupadi, a dalit woman from Dumkha District, Jharkhand died when she fell off from a bus due to negligence of the driver. Asha Mahila Sangha demanded benefit for her deprived heirs under National Family Benefit Scheme but the block development officer denied giving any money to the family saying that she was a woman and the sole bread earner of the family. But the family with the support of Asha Mahila Sangh continued its protests and appeals and finally succeeded in getting Rs.10,000 as per the mentioned scheme.

The right to social security is of central importance in guaranteeing human dignity for all persons when they are faced with circumstances that deprive them of their capacity to fully realize their Covenant rights.

A shared during North-East consultations (25-27 March, 2008)

1. Anita Das, a domestic worker, is a mother of three children. Her husband is a construction worker. She stays in the Six-mile area of Guwahati city. Her husband while painting a hostel wall of veterinary college has fallen down and fractured his left leg. Contractor did not pay a penny for the treatment but instead paid the wage for the last 15 days, ie Rs. 500. Society for Social Transformation and Environment Protection (STEP), working for the rights of people of unorganized sector took up the issue and asked the contractor to pay compensation.
Two girls living from Gujarat ran away to get married. They were arrested in Vadodara and taken to Allahabad where they were presented before the Court. They said they want to get married. The court held that the marriage was not possible. The girls said that they had attained the age of majority. There is no law in India which forbids lesbian marriage.

Guru from Karnataka talked about a MSM who would go to the park after college and indulge in sex with other men. One day his father saw him with another boy and asked him to know about his activities. From that day, the boy was locked up in his house and allowed only to go to college. Everyone in his family shunned him. Guru came to know of this boy from his friend. He asked the boy to introduce him as his friend. Now after Guru’s visit to the house, the family has understood a little about the boy's sexual orientation and to a certain extent allowed some freedom. Section 377 of Indian penal Code (IPC) discriminates persons on the basis of their sexual orientation, and asserts that the offence is “sodomy.” Section 377 was put into place for the rule’s country of origin.

The Haryana Cabinet on July 21, 2006 decided to promulgate an Ordinance to amend Section 175(q) of the Haryana Panchayati Raj Act, 1994, retrospectively with effect from January 1, 2005 to omit the section which forbids lesbian marriage.

(a) Meena, a widow is person living with HIV in Karnataka was ousted by her in-laws from her husband house. She has been denied the right to property of her dead husband and is now forced to live outside with her four children.

(b) Sheela used to study in class 12th when her family started preparing to send her into commercial sexual exploitation. She never wanted to enter into it but it was forced on her as per the custom of her society. She met a client named Imraan and felt an attachment with him. One day she ran away with him to his village in Uttar Pradesh. She was happy there, but three months later her family members reached there and persuaded her to come back with them. She denied to do go back with her family in her statement before the police. But her family returned back with a false complaint against Imraan and got him arrested. They took away Sheela with them and again forced her into commercial sexual exploitation.

100 Shared during consultation with women (4- 6th March, 2008)

101 In Pakistan, “triple talaq,” or instantaneous verbal divorce, has been illegal since 1961. Again Turkey, Indonesia, Iraq, Iran and Bangladesh have legally banned one-sided divorces, which gave men arbitrary powers to break marriages, while countries like Egypt, Sudan, Jordan, Tunisia, Morocco, Pakistan and Bangladesh had banned the practice of triple talaq long ago. Amardeep, Update on Triple Talaq, Indian Express, December, 08, 2004

102 India Government’s statement of reservation on Article 5(a) and 16(1) of the Convention on Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW) that it shall abide by and ensure these provisions in conformity with its policy of non – interference in the personal affairs of any community without its initiative and consent.

103 Shared during the consultation with women (4-6th March, 2008)

104 Women from Gujarat shared that post riots they now face extra dress code of wearing burkha, restriction on their mobility, withdrawal of older girls from schools.
According to Railway Budget 2008-09, AIDS and HIV patients would be able to travel at 50 per cent of ticket fare.

The decline in child sex ratio in India is evident by comparing the census figures. In 1991, the figure was 947 girls to 1000 boys. Ten years later it had fallen to 927 girls for 1000 boys. There are alarming signs of decline in child sex ratio in tribal societies: Declining from 985 (1991) to 973 (2001) Rural 986 (1991) to 974 (2001)and Urban 971 (1991)

The Preconception and Prenatal Diagnostic Techniques (Regulation and Prevention Act), 1994 and amended in 2003 to counter son preference; The Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act, 2005 to address violence against women within family; Dowry Prohibition Act, 1961, The Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes(Prevention of Atrocities) Act, 1989; The Supreme Court has given mandatory guidelines, known as Vishaka Guidelines, for resolution and prevention of sexual harassment enjoining employers by holding them responsible for providing safe work environment for women

73.4% and Female Literacy Rate in 2001was 47.8%. Life expectancy in India in 2001 was 66.28 years. Maternal Mortality Ratio was 408 per one lakh of population according to National Population Policy, 2000. Sex ratio in 2001 was 929.https://www.cia.gov/library/publications/the world factbook/geos/in.html

According to the Statistics of the Registrar General in India, the proportion of women in the workforce in 1981 was 19.67 per cent and it rose to 22.73 per cent in 1991, further rising to 25.68 per cent in 2001.

A. The case of Hmar mass gang rape on 16th Jan, 2006 by militants namely the United Nation Liberation Front (UNLF) and Kangleipak Communist Party (KCP). 21 woman have testified for rape and another for 6 for molestation to the Rajkhowa

B. Thingram Anjulika Samom, Guns and Widows, India Together, 24th July 2007

Male Literacy Rate in 2001 was 73.4% and Female Literacy Rate in 2001was 47.8%. Life expectancy in India in 2001 was 66.28 years. Maternal Mortality Ratio was 408 per one lakh of population according to National Population Policy, 2000. Sex ratio in 2001 was 929.https://www.cia.gov/library/publications/the world factbook/geos/in.html

According to the Statistics of the Registrar General in India, the proportion of women in the workforce in 1981 was 19.67 per cent and it rose to 22.73 per cent in 1991, further rising to 25.68 per cent in 2001.

Shadow Report Consultation with North-Eastern Region (25-27 March 2008) A. The case of Hmar mass gang rape on 16th Jan, 2006 by militants namely the United Nation Liberation Front (UNLF) and Kangleipak Communist Party (KCP). 21 woman have testified for rape and another for 6 for molestation to the Rajkhowa commission, which was set up in March 2006, yet till date they have not submitted its report. State cabinet announced interim relief for 21 woman who were raped, the HMAR groups intervene to plead for inclusion of the other 6 victims as well, but none of the 27 women have received any money or any form of support till date.

B. Thingram Anjulika Samom, Guns and Widows, India Together, 24th July 2007

Child sex ratio in 2001 was 927. IMR was 68 in 2000. http://www.censusindia.gov.

Whereas the Indian government affiliated V.V. Giri Labour Institute estimates that there are 12.5 million

Turning a Blind Eye: Child Soldiers at war in Moist Conflict of India, http://www.ffdaindia.in/publications/text1/

India has ratified Convention on Rights of the Child in 1992

India may not be a party to the Geneva Convention Additional Protocols but it has a legal obligation to protect civilians caught in the cross-fire between the Maoists and state-sponsored vigilantes in Chhattisgarh; Siddharth Varadharajan, Salwa Judum and International Humanitarian Law, The Hindu, 8th September, 2007

Turning a Blind Eye: Child Soldiers at war in Moist Conflict of India, http://www.ffdaindia.in/publications/text1/

India has ratified Convention on Rights of the Child in 1992

Infra Note … Right to Adequate Standard of Living

Infra Note … Right to Adequate Standard of Living

Turning a Blind Eye: Child Soldiers at war in Moist Conflict of India, http://www.ffdaindia.in/publications/text1/

Kapileshwar ,Dalkil Adhikar Manch , Bihar; Katta Swamidas, President of Dalit Samakhya; Durgesh Nandini, Jan Sangarsh Morcha, community member from Baiga tribes(Particularly Vulnerable Groups) in Madhya Pradesh, as shared during the consultations in 2008

As described in the Government of India Report, ICESCR

The Rajasthan People Union for Civil Liberties(PUCL) has filed a writ Petition in the Supreme Court pointing out that while on the one hand the stocks of food grains in the country are more than the capacity of storage facilities, on the other hand there are reports from various states alleging starvation deaths. The petition seek's intervention to give remedial directions to the Government. While the Petitioners focussed on the 'starvation deaths', the Supreme Court enlarged the scope of the right to Food to include malnutrition, distribution and access to food and designed enforcement mechanisms and remedies to implement the right. The Supreme Court, in an unprecedented interim order on 28 November 2001, directed Union of India and all the state governments to effectively enforce eight different food schemes to the poor. These food schemes were not only declared as entitlements (rights) of the poor but the apex Court also laid down very specific time limits for the implementation of these schemes with the responsibility on the states to submit compliance affidavits to the court. These included the Antyodaya Anna Yojna, the Annapurna Anna Yojana, National Old-Age Pension Scheme, National Fertility benefit Scheme, the Integrated Child Development Services (ICDS) programme, the National Mid-day Meals Programme (NMMP).

Establishment of Supreme Court commissioners and state level advisors to the Commissioners

Bottlenecks in some of the major schemes as shared in all the consultations include:

a) PDS shops do not open on public time, but left to the whims of the shop owner, quality of food grains is poor.

I. Shared during Consultation on Urban Poor (Jan 22-24, 2008) Munna Lal, who lives in E-286, J.J Colony Bawana, Delhi has not been getting any ration for the last one year. This was revealed during a public audit done by Jagori on 7th July, 2007. Meena, also a resident of J.J Colony, Bawana has made a duplicate card for the last 3 months after loosing her original card. Yet she has not been getting any ration for these three months. The public audit revealed that 24 families are not getting the allotted amount of grains. Of these families 3 of them have cards, where oil credit is shown but the name of the depot and it's number is not shown. The families have become a part of a vicious cycle of poverty. The family entry card is due to eviction and the food ration is not distributed by the authorities to them even if they have the ration cards. In the three districts- Visakhapatnam, Vizianagaram and Srikakulam majority of endangered tribal communities (PTGs- Savara, Khond, Gadaba and Porja tribes) live in remote hilly regions. In order to access ration from DR depots they have to travel long distance as the depots are situated at a distance of 5 to 31 kilometers and they are open at a maximum for 8 days in a month. If people fail to release the ration under different grounds (shortage of money, depot not open etc.) during that period, they are not given any ration. The tribals are also not able to release full quota at a single point of time in a month because of the absence of financial resources. and there is no provision releasing the ration in installments. There are malpractices in weighing by the sales personnel. Most often they are provided with poor quality rice.

II. Shared during Consultation on Dalits (Feb 5-7, 2008) a) In Gottivada of Kurupam mandal, Vijayanagaram district, Andhra Pradesh there is a DR depot. One of the members of the Priyadarshini Mahila Sangham Ms Lalitha devi took the responsibility of maintaining the depot. But she had difficulty in repaying the loan of ITDA from the income. Hence, she handed over the depot to her brother Sessa Rao for maintenance. For PTG AAY card holders, he gives 34 Kgs of rice instead of 35 Kgs, 2 litres of kerosene instead of 3 litres and collects Rs 10/- per litre, when the actual price is Rs 9 per litre. If any one questions him he arrogantly answers and says go and ask the MRO. He was selling the rice and kerosene in the black market.

b) In the three districts- Visakhapatnam, Vizianagaram and Srikakulam majority of endangered tribal communities (PTGs- Savara, Khond, Gadaba and Porja tribes) live in remote hilly regions. In order to access ration from DR depots they have to travel long distance as the depots are situated at a distance of 5 to 31 kilometers and they are open at a maximum for 8 days in a month. If people fail to release the ration under different grounds (shortage of money, depot not open etc.) during that period, they are not given any ration. The tribals are also not able to release full quota at a single point of time in a month because of the absence of financial resources. and there is no provision releasing the ration in installments. There are malpractices in weighing by the sales personnel. Most often they are provided with poor quality rice.

Shared during Consultation on Dalits (5-7 February, 2008)

Chinnamma and her husband, live in Kothapeta village of Pachipenta mandal, Andhra Pradesh. They belong to Kondadora tribe. They live on podu in a small piece of land and are unable to provide even two square meals to their children. Their only hope is from the anganwadi center run in Madamalasa village, a km away from their village They send their children to the anganwadi. But the center remains closed for 15 days in a month and children do not get any diet meant for them during those days. The anganwadi teacher takes away the food items supplied for the children in the center. Because of lack of proper diet my younger son is suffering from marasmus and this is happening to many children in our villages.

A violation of the immediate obligation as mentioned in General Comment 15. The equal right of men and women. This was shared during Consultation on Dalits (5-7 February, 2008). In Kham Padva village of Madhya Pradesh, there are 400 dalit families but the Rajput and Gurjar families outnumber them. The dalits primarily work as wage labourers and their children go to the local primary school. Ambedkar Vichar Manch found severe discrimination towards dalit children in such schools. The food was thrown upon from above to the dalit children instead of bending down and serving the food on their plates when the children were seated on the floor for lunch in schools.

Urban poor, such as rickshaw pullers, street vendors, homeless, do not have a regular place of stay, for years they move from one pavement to the other. 85% of the households did not have ration cards, according to the report “Being with Nothingness”, published by The Calcutta Samaritans in 2006. 650 households formed the sample of the study and the sample size was 7.44% of the total homeless households in Calcutta.

Shared during Consultation on Urban Poor (22-24 January, 2008)
"I have not got work for the past 5 days. The food grain that I brought from my village is about to finish. I'm worried about my family: if I don't get work in the next few days, what will we eat, and how will we go back to our village?" (A man aged 32 years, who migrated with family to Peth Phata naka, Nasik) Access to subsidised food grain was the immediate priority as identified by the migrants. Unlike permanent residents of Nashik, migrant families witnessed fall in income below the poverty line. They did not have access to ration cards and thereby, to regular supplies of subsidised food grains. And irregular employment opportunities resulted in acute food scarcity and debt trap. Indeed, anaemia and malnutrition were commonly observed among migrants in all six nakas. Following consultations with the Department of Public Distribution and the Ration Department (Nashik Municipal Corporation) and on-site visits by the authorities, an order was issued to provide seasonal migrants with temporary ration cards for four months (extendable to 12 months) against their existing ration cards. Migrants must have the cards cancelled by the ration department when they depart for their areas of origin so that they are eligible once again for subsidised food grain in their home villages; the cards could be renewed on their return to Nashik. The PDS issued 250 temporary ration cards to homeless nomadic tribes who have been residing in Nashik since last 15 years. The facilitation was done by Bhatka Vimukta Mahasangh.

PDS consumption of wheat/atta was most common in Karnataka, rural areas of Gujarat and Maharashtra, and in Madhya Pradesh, Press Note on Public Distribution System and other sources of household consumption, 2004-05

Letter of Minister of Human Resource Development, Mr. Arjun Singh. Annexure 1

General Comment 4 on the Right to Adequate housing Para 8 Shared during Consultation on Urban Poor (Jan 22-24, 2008) Evictions from Kanchanpuri and Balrampur to Bawana in 2005 resulted in loss of employment for men as well as women of the poor community. The Reversal of judicial activism on shelter rights can be seen in the following cases. In Bombay

The Jawaharlal Nehru National Urban Renewal Mission(JNNURM) is a reform linked incentive scheme for proving assistance to state governments and Urban Local Bodies (ULBs) in selected 63 cities, comprising all cities with an urban population over one million, with the exception of Delhi. The purpose of reforming urban governance, facilitating urban infrastructure and providing basic services to the poor is to take active interest in beautification of cities.

The Supreme Court of India has elaborated at great length on the right to adequate housing, shelter and livelihood as part of the all-encompassing Right to Life under Article 21 of the Constitution in the landmark case of Olga Tellis v. Bombay Municipal Corporation, 1985 (3) SCC 545 which was later upheld by cases like Chameli Singh v. State of UP[1996] 1 SCALE 101 and Shantistat Builders v. Narayan Himalal Totame and Ors AIR 1990 SC 630

The Reversal of judicial activism on shelter rights can be seen in the following cases. In Bombay Environment Action group V Bharathi ( 2000) Court not only ordered mass eviction, but it explicitly ordered the demolition of homes and the destruction of all belongings and construction materials that, in the first wave of evictions, were gathered and burnt by the demolition squad. In Almitra Patel V Union of India (2000)

Rewarding an encroacher on public land with free alternate site is like giving a reward to a pickpocket. Further in NBA V UOI (2000) despite full knowledge of the concerned authorities’ failure to determine the total number of people to be displaced or find adequate land for their resettlement, and the incomplete resettlement of those already displaced, the Supreme Court ruled that, ‘...displacement of the tribals and other persons would not per se result in the violation of their fundamental or other rights..’ and held that the construction of the dam would continue.

Supra note 131 on Eviction in Bawana, Delhi

"Establishment or creating of slums, it seems, appears to be good business and is well organised. The number of slums has multiplied in the last few years by geometrical proportion. Large areas of public land, in this way, are usurped for private use free of cost. It is difficult to believe that this can happen in the capital of the country without passive or active connivance of the land owning agencies and/or the municipal authorities."

47 families in Behrampura area in Gujarat were forced to vacate their rental houses on 28th February and 1st March, 2002 where they had been staying for more than 30 years during the riots as they were attacked by rioters. But immediately after they... vacated their houses, the owner of Ghasiram ki challi built a wall blocking the return of these tenants. However the residents did not give up their fight. With the effort of Aman Samudaya and the initiative of some tenants such as Sharifa, the Municipality authorities were convinced and eventually made to demolish the wall. But the owner Bholaram has approached the Metropolitan Court with a case against the tenant’s illegal encroachment of the land through reconstruction of houses. The tenants fight against Bholaram’s action continues as they struggle for their right to adequate standard of living.

Shared during Consultation on Violence in Kandhamal district of Orissa against Dalits and Adivasis. Draft Note Observations and Demands.

(1) From 25th December to 27th December frenzy mobs destroyed around 60 churches and other social and development institutions/orgainizations working for the development of Pana Christians and Adivasis.

(2) Another thing that the team had observed is that the Dalits in this village are being terrorised living under great fear. Dalits of Bramanigaon left the village and most men and young boys are still in the forest (in hiding) and are very vulnerable incidents to the backlash violence. All the members observed this during the visit.

In 27th December the houses of Hindus, primarily of General Castes, OBCs, population in Bramanigaon (Over 100 houses) and Godapur (over 50 shops and houses attached to them) have been fully or partially destroyed and/or torched allegedly by the Pano Christians and Adivasis. There were two sets of opinions that the team received. A) It is counter attack by the Pano Christians and Adivasis. B) Police alleges that it is the work of ’Naxalits’s. C) As alleged by caste Hindu women “local Panos do not have courage to destruct our houses”. The team could not come to any opinion on this matter within the evidence that was available.

About 44,000 indigenous Karbis and Dimasas were displaced in a conflict which claimed over 90 lives. Away from the attention of the national media, Assam Chief Minister Tarun Gogoi stated that such macabre killings continue and/or torched allegedly by the Pano Christians and Adivasis. There were two sets of opinions that the team received.

b) JTWWS and Bharati Trust during their work for Tsunami victims have found that the Irulas have been discriminated in many ways in the relief and rehabilitation process. There are cases where the fisherfolk prevented Irulas from receiving relief, where Irulas were not allowed to access medical camps set up by the Govt and other charitable institutions by the fishing community and where Irulas were not allowed to draw water from common wells around relief camps. The fishing community prevented the Irulas from staying with them in the Camps as well.

(1) From 25th December to 27th December frenzy mobs destroyed around 60 churches and other social and development institutions and organizations working for the development of Pana Christians and Adivasis.

(2) Another thing that the team had observed is that the Dalits in this village are being terrorised living under great fear. Dalits of Bramanigaon left the village and most men and young boys are still in the forest (in hiding) and are very vulnerable incidents to the backlash violence. All the members observed this during the visit.

In 27th December the houses of Hindus, primarily of General Castes, OBCs, population in Bramanigaon (Over 100 houses) and Godapur (over 50 shops and houses attached to them) have been fully or partially destroyed and/or torched allegedly by the Pano Christians and Adivasis. There were two sets of opinions that the team received. A) It is counter attack by the Pano Christians and Adivasis. B) Police alleges that it is the work of ’Naxalits’s. C) As alleged by caste Hindu women “local Panos do not have courage to destruct our houses”. The team could not come to any opinion on this matter within the evidence that was available.

About 44,000 indigenous Karbis and Dimasas were displaced in a conflict which claimed over 90 lives. Away from the attention of the national media, Assam Chief Minister Tarun Gogoi stated that such macabre killings were bound to happen in the jungles, http://www.achrweb.org/reports/india/AR06/preface.htm adopted reforms in health care. It also examines the experiences of other countries with regard to one financial strategy, i.e., user fee and its impact on cost recovery, utilisation, and equity and shows that user fee as a strategy did not give the expected results. It concludes that user fee in India may not be suitable because here 75 to 80 per cent of the users are from private sector. Also, user fees as a tool to reduce the financial burden may not be applicable in the Indian context with its high poverty levels, malnutrition, inequity in health facilities and low literacy levels.

152 Extensive shrimp cultivation, sand mining, thorium extraction, displacement, forced into unhygienic resettlement colonies.

153 Cholera outburst in Orissa; measles outburst in Madhya Prades;

154 General Comment 14, the Right to the highest attainable standard of health.

155 Shared during Consultation on Fisherfolk (Dec 16-18,2007). Chitra, a 36 year old woman from Nagapattinam, Tamilnadu had lost both her children during Tsunami and was emotionally as well as physically unwilling to go through reverse sterilization. Her in-laws verbal abuse became more torturing once the Tamilnadu Govt. announced financial benefits to the beneficiaries of such Schemes. Despite all her unwillingness she was forced to go through the reverse canalization. After the physically demanding process, the money has not been paid to the family by the Tamilnadu government and abuse of her in-laws has increased. Inspite of this, she showed determination in persuading her husband to adopt an orphan child of Tsunami.

157 Infant Mortality rate of Scheduled tribe is 84.2, Bulletin on rural Health Statistics in India, 2005, Ministry of Health and Family Welfare.

158 Article 45 before it was amended read as follows: “Provision for free and compulsory education for children.—The State shall Endeavour to provide, within a period of ten years from the commencement of this Constitution, for free and compulsory education for all children until they complete the age of fourteen years.”

159 Ministry of Human Resource Development, 2005-06

160 Shared during the Consultation (Indigenous Communities, North East 25-27th March., 2008). It was reported that most of the teachers are spouses of government officials who remain on the rolls of the education department only to draw salary while assigning physical presence in the schools to unqualified substitutes through informal subcontracting. In Northern high School, Imphal there are 23 teachers and no students, in mikola J.B School, Imphal there are 20 teachers and 20 students and in Keishampat Hodan Leizak J. B School, Imphal there are 18 teachers and 22 students. (2) Shared during the consultation (Dalit communities, Hyderabad, 5- 7th, February, 2008) In Somagandi Panchayat of Sitampeta Mandal, Andhra Pradesh there are 15 anganwadi schools. Most of the centers are opened for about 10 days in a month. The play items are left unused because most of the times the centers are not open.

161 In a study conducted on the status of education, employment and health in the coastal area of Thiruvanthapuram corporation by Fisheries Research Cell Programme for Community Organisation in 2000, it was found that of the population of age 5 plus, 27% were illiterates. Focus Group Discussion (FGD) revealed that many students from the coastal area who had high school education could not read or write. 14% of the children (age group 5-14 years) in the survey were drop outs.

162 Shared during the Consultation (Dalit, 5-7th, February, 2008).Kumhrar slum is settled since 1997 in Patna. In 2003, Nidan an NGO became successful in getting admission of 60 dalit children into primary school near the slum. Initially, the Principal refused, and the Block federation officer asked for Rs.10 as admission charge. Then he also refused to give receipts for the money received and was considering the admission of only 30 out of 60 students. But with the initiative of Nidan, the authorities had to finally give in to the demand and gave admission to all.

163 B. Shared during the NE Consultation (March 25-27, 2008)

The girl child who has been discriminated in this case is a 11 year old who is HIV positive and whose mother is also positive. She is studying in koinonia Training English Schoool. She hails from Chander district, Manipur. The child faces numerous discrimination in all walks of life ie while playing with her friends in the playground, in the school the teachers don’t treat her well.

164 Cholera outburst in Orissa; measles outburst in Madhya Prades;

166 In a study conducted on the status of education, employment and health in the coastal area of Thiruvanthapuram corporation by Fisheries Research Cell Programme for Community Organisation in 2000, it was found that of the population of age 5 plus, 27% were illiterates. Focus Group Discussion (FGD) revealed that many students from the coastal area who had high school education could not read or write. 14% of the children (age group 5-14 years) in the survey were drop outs.

167 Shared during the Consultation ( Dalit communities, Hyderabad, 5- 7th, February, 2008) In Somagandi Panchayat of Sitampeta Mandal, Andhra Pradesh there are 15 anganwadi schools. Most of the centers are opened for about 10 days in a month. The play items are left unused because most of the times the centers are not open.

168 In a study conducted on the status of education, employment and health in the coastal area of Thiruvanthapuram corporation by Fisheries Research Cell Programme for Community Organisation in 2000, it was found that of the population of age 5 plus, 27% were illiterates. Focus Group Discussion (FGD) revealed that many students from the coastal area who had high school education could not read or write. 14% of the children (age group 5-14 years) in the survey were drop outs.

169 Shared during the Consultation (Dalit, 5-7th, February, 2008).Kumhrar slum is settled since 1997 in Patna. In 2003, Nidan an NGO became successful in getting admission of 60 dalit children into primary school near the slum. Initially, the Principal refused, and the Block federation officer asked for Rs.10 as admission charge. Then he also refused to give receipts for the money received and was considering the admission of only 30 out of 60 students. But with the initiative of Nidan, the authorities had to finally give in to the demand and gave admission to all.

170 Shared during the Consultation with Dalit.( 5-7th, February, 2008) The anganwadi school run in Palignan, Bihar bearing no.39 under the Sameevit Balvikas Pariyojana does not benefit the musahar (dalit) children staying there as the food meant for the children is consumed by the teachers themselves. The teachers resort to the practice of shooing away the children from schools rather than encouraging them to regularly attend the classes.

171 Shared during the Consultation with Dalit.( 5-7th, February, 2008) The anganwadi center in Madamalasa village, Andhra Pradesh caters to education needs of 3 villages and 50 children are registered under this center. But this center remains closed for 15 days in a month and children do not get any diet meant for them during those days. The anganwadi teacher takes away the food items supplied for the children in the center.

172 Shared during the Consultation with Dalit.( 5-7th, February, 2008) Case of discrimination in Seating arrangements in Kukurabad Primary School of a dalit child Prakash was reported to Dalit Adhikaar Abhiyaan, Harda, Madhya Pradesh.

173 India Hidden Apartheid: Caste Discrimination against India’s "Untouchables". Shadow Report submitted to the UN Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discriminationhttp://www.chrgj.org/docs/IndiaCERDShadowReport.pdf children to regular 'mainstream' schools rather than to madrasas and Urdu-medium schools, contrary to respondents. From these figures it emerges that the majority of parents in these localities prefer to send their children to English-medium schools, 17.7% Hindi-medium schools, and 6.0% were attending Urdu-medium schools, 17.7% English-medium schools, 15.4% Hindi-medium schools, and only 5.1% were enrolled in madrasas. A majority of the children were going to government schools, and the proportion of those in private schools was only 27.8%, indicating the high levels of poverty among the children of the respondents were not attending any school. Of those children who were going to school, the head master said that if he gives admission to the infected child parents of the other children will remove their wards from the school as reported by WINS, Andhra Pradesh.

174 After the pogrom in Gujarat, education of Muslim girl children in the neighborhood schools were discontinued by the parents out of fear for the safety of their daughters.

According to a study jointly done by Indian Social Institute and Action Aid in 2005, it was found that 32.5% of the children of the respondents were not attending any school. Of those who were going to school, 6.0% were attending Urdu-medium schools, 17.7% English-medium schools, 15.4% Hindi-medium schools, and only 5.1% were enrolled in madrasas. A majority of the children were going to government schools, and the proportion of those in private schools was only 27.8%, indicating the high levels of poverty among the children of the respondents were not attending any school. Of those children who were going to school, the head master said that if he gives admission to the infected child parents of the other children will remove their wards from the school as reported by WINS, Andhra Pradesh.

Shared During the consultation (Tribals, 8-10\textsuperscript{th}, February, 2008) Central Model residential school at Madya Padavu, Mangalore was established in 1990 by Integrated Tribal Development Programme (ITDP) of Dakshina Kannada district for Koraga community. The school suffered from negligence and retired teachers were appointed for teaching. Even though it is a residential school, there were no permanent teachers, warden, cook and security guard. As a result, the performance of the students from Koraga community suffered and there was 0% result in Std.X in 2005-06 batch. Samagra Grameen Ashram, Udupi and Koraga federation of Samagra Grameen Ashram jointly advocated for improvements in the school. This led to a hike in teacher’s salary from Rs.2500 to Rs.6000, 2006 onwards and consequentially, 80% result in 2006-07 batch was achieved.

Shared During the consultation (People living with HIV and AIDS and Sexuality Minorities, (30-1\textsuperscript{st} February, 2008) Sneha Samudaya in Gujarat came across this case where 8 year old Darshan and elder brother were dispelled from Arya Samaj school after being declared HIV positive. Their mother died in 2004 and father is mentally retarded. Media pressure and sensitization of school management helped in enrolling back these children in school; An infected child from Andhra Pradesh was denied admission in school. Since the head master said that if he gives admission to the infected child parents of the other children will remove their wards from the school as reported by WINS, Andhra Pradesh.

Shared During the consultation (Dalits, 5-7\textsuperscript{th}, February, 2008) Ms. Kavitha is the third child of Mr. Elisha & Mrs. Dhanamma. Her parents go for daily labour and frequently go to Bombay in search of job as migrant workers. She has got two elder brothers and one sister. Her brothers have studied up to Std.III and IV and then they had to discontinue their studies. Since last 2 years Kavitha has discontinued her studies, with great difficulties she studied up to Std.VI. Now she is supporting her family by working as a daily labourer and doing grafting at cotton field.

Shared During the Consultation (Urban Poor, 22-24\textsuperscript{th} January, 2008) Ragpickers in Delhi, are primarily children of migrant labourers or are orphans. In September 2002 a PIL was done in High Court demanding right to education for rag picking children. It stated that land allotted for schools to provide free education to the children belonging to economically weaker sections was hardly complied to. Instead children such as ragpickers were frequently beaten up in schools and suffered from lack of care and attention in schools even if they leave ragpicking to attend schools.

(1) Shared During the Consultation (Urban Poor, 22-24\textsuperscript{th} January, 2008) Municipal Corporation of Delhi school in Bawana, Haryana was turned into a dispensary first and then, the boys were shifted out to make space for the office of the Deputy Commissioner of MCD. (2) Shared During the Consultation (Tribal, 8-10\textsuperscript{th} January, 2008) Para Military forces have occupied the school and staying in School in the name of Maoists and Salwa Judum.

Unnikrishnan V State of Andhra Pradesh (1993) 1 SCC 645. The present case concerned the challenge of the validity of certain state legislations regulating the charging of fees by private educational institutions and prohibiting the charging of capitation fees from students seeking information. The Court has recognized a fundamental right to education in the right to life under Article 21. Taking help of Art 41 and 45 it has held that 'every child/citizen of this country has a right to free education until he completes the age of fourteen years.

Supra note 172

No Person shall be deprived of his life or personal liberty except according to procedure established by law.

(a) The State shall provide free and compulsory education to all children of the age of six to fourteen years in such manner as the State may, by law, determine.

(b) Justice Rajendra Babu, Chairperson of National Human Rights Commission (NHRC) in a conference at New Delhi on the Right to Education observed as follows: Normally a statute is tested against a Fundamental Right. Here is a proposed fundamental right which seeks to be regulated by a statute. (Not a quote but a gist of his statement)

The United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) (2002) described culture as follows: ‘... culture should be regarded as the set of distinctive spiritual, material, intellectual and emotional features of society or a social group, and that it encompasses, in addition to art and literature, lifestyles, ways of living together, value systems, traditions and beliefs’.

Sharing during the different consultation from Jhabua, Madhya Pradesh; Rajasthan, Gujarat, Orissa, Chattisgarh. Distribution of statues of Hanuman and mass gathering in Gujarat eulogizing 'Shabari’ indicate their assimilation of the tribal community in the lowest rung of the Hindu order, as sevaks.
In Gujarat during 2002, over 200 places of worship—shrines, mosques and even cemeteries were destroyed. Temples were planted in place of mosque at Bhatta and Vasna in Ahmedabad. The Human Rights Watch (New York, April 30, 2002) India: Gujarat Officials Took Part in Anti-Muslim Violence.

At the end of 2003, 286 muslims were booked under Prevention of Terrorist Act (POTA) on flimsy grounds and a deliberate attempt was made to make it appear that the Muslim community as a whole had taken to terrorism as a reaction to the post Godhra violence directed against it. Zakia Jowher et al, POTA in Gujarat and its meaning for India, www.sacw.net/Gujarat2002/Dube_Jowher15August2004.html